A Restoration Comedy At Theatre Conspiracy

by Di Saggau

Tt's not often that one gets to see a a comedy that first performed in 1675 and was shunned for two centuries due to its explicitly licentious content. The Country Wife by William Wycherly is that play and you can see it now at Theatre Conspiracy, located in the Foulds Theatre at the Alliance for the Arts.

The strong cast of 12 offers the audience the pleasures of dusty wigs, period costumes, foolish wits and winning performances. The play is regarded as one of the greatest comedies of the Restoration.

The Country Wife is a bawdy satire about a country wife whose husband thinks she'll never cheat on him because she's too naive, and a man who pretends to be impotent, thereby getting the husbands to inadvertently give their wives to him. The set is designed to enhance the play's tiptoeing between marital and social entrapment and promiscuity.

J. Mitchell Haley is delightful as Horner, the cynical conniver. He plays a fine balance between the opportunistic sex fiend and a deeply cynical social observer. Jim Yarnes is compelling as Pinchwife, a jealous husband, frantic and always chattering as he allows us to feel his obsessive fears that his wife Margery might succumb to Horner's charms. You'll see another side of him during the letter writing scene.

Shelly Sanders is Margery and she gives a brilliant combination of country innocence and cruel honesty. Her body language is clever as she goes from childish and coquettish into a complete Restoration lady. I very much enjoyed Tom Marsh's portrayal of Sparkish, as he swishes about the stage twirling his lace hankie in his flamboyant costume and hair.

Cantrella Canady offers an amusing performance as Lady Fidget. She and the other ladies' famous china scene with Horner is a highlight of the evening.

The rest of the cast is also to be commended. They are Stephen Hooper as Dr. Quack, Elvis Mortley as Jasper Fidget, Mike Dinko as Dorliant, Juan Alejandro as Harcourt, Dena Galyean as Alithea, Marianette Torres as Dainty and Tera Nicole Miller as Squeamish. Together the cast recreates the vibrancy and irresistible appeal of Restoration decadence.

Directed by Karen Goldberg, The Country Wife runs through Saturday, December 17. Theatre Conspiracy in the Foulds Theatre at the Alliance for the Arts is located at 10091 McGregor Boulevard in Fort Myers. To purchase tickets, go to www.theatreconspiracy.org or call 936-3239.☆

Historic Downtown Fort Myers, Then And Now:

View From Heitman's Yard

by Gerri Reaves, PhD

he scene captured in this circa 1906 view has changed so much that one would never guess that it pictures a section of First Street that today is in the heart of the business district. The southeasterly view is from the front vard of Harvie E. and Florida Heitman on the north side of First between today's Jackson

Across the unpaved street and visible, albeit a bit indistinctly, are the 1903 O'Neill Memorial Methodist Church (far left) and a couple of private homes, all wood-frame.

The many pedestrians across the street, many carrying umbrellas or parasols, suggests that a service just ended at the church.

The Heitman property was known for its lush shady garden, plentiful fruit trees -- note the mature mango trees - and neat white fence.

When the historic photo was taken, the Heitman home was the oldest structure in town, a former officers' quarters built in the 1850s when downtown Fort Myers was a Third Seminole War-era U.S. Army fort, not a town. (The fort stood on the site where U.S. Army Fort Harvie had been built in 1841 during the Second Seminole War.)

So, the photographer stood on what is arguably the historically significant spot in downtown Fort Myers.

The Heitmans' much-admired tropical foliage included a famous date palm planted by Capt. Winfield Scott Hancock to commemorate his newborn daughter, Ada Elizabeth, in 1857, when he was stationed at the fort.

Heitman's successful grocery-general store was just across Jackson Street on the northwest corner. One of the town's most influential and successful businessmen and developers, Heitman built that brick building in 1897 to 1898 to replace a wood-frame one. It stands today and is the city's oldest brick building.

After he died in 1922 at the age of 49, his home stood vacant for a while. Then in 1926, it was moved north across Bay Street to become the Fort Myers Public Library's first permanent home.

In 1933, a U.S. Post Office was built on the site where the photographer stood. Today, the impressive former post office has been transformed into the Sidney & Berne Davis Art Center.

As for the completely changed view across First Street: The former First United Methodist Church stands on the site where the O'Neill church once did.

However, that 1953 structure is no longer a Methodist church, for recently, the city's oldest congregation sold the property.

Now, the Fort Myers Regional Library and Corneg Plaza occupy property where houses stood in the first decade of the 20th century.

Walk down to the art center, look southeast, and imagine mango trees, a quaint church down on the corner, and church-goers strolling down First Street.

White Christmas Delivers On Multiple Levels

by Tom Hall

If Bing Crosby and Danny Kaye's 1954 remake of Holiday Inn has become a Christmas tradition in your household, you may think there's nothing new for you to see in Broadway Palm's production of Irving Berlin's White Christmas. Well, you'd be Bah-Humbug wrong! The sets are grand, the costumes sparkle, and the singing and dancing are spectacular. And if you consider yourself a true, dyed-in-the-wool White Christmas fan, you will be fascinated by the deviations and plot twists that have been made in order to convert the classic film into a classy live-theatre musical.

For those of you who just want to be entertained, well, as the song promises, The Best Things Happen When You're Dancing, and that's a function of Amy Marie McClary's skilled and imaginative choreography and the hard work, dedication and talent of her exuberant ensemble and the rest of the large holiday cast. The ensemble alone consists of 10 dancers (who also sing), and when the full entourage is on stage together, it becomes as busy as Times Square on New Year's Eve. Part of the fun is watching how everyone moves through Evan Adamson's colorful, well-constructed sets.

Sami Doherty and Nic Casaula play the roles of Judy Haynes and Phil Davis, and they sizzle from the moment Casaula takes Doherty in his arms for Best Things, which incorporates many of the best elements of a Dancing With The Stars freestyle performance including a number of exacting ballroom lifts and stylized drops that would even delight Carrie Ann Inaba.

The large song-and-dance numbers are spellbinding because of their sheer size, split-second timing and coordination, and exceptional costuming. Face it, though. Many theater-goers will buy tickets to White Christmas just to hear the music. It's Irving Berlin, for love's sake! He's pure magic in a Beatles kind of way.

The book for Irving Berlin's White Christmas was written by David Ives and Paul Blake. It's dated (of course, the play is set in 1954), but the script has been excoriated by reviewers since the show's release in 2004 as lackluster and uninspired. Top hats off to McCleary and the cast. Through a combination of kinetic energy, fine acting and unbounded holiday cheer, they overcome whatever shortcoming exists when it comes to character development and plot.

That said, there's surprisingly more here than initially meets the eye for folks demanding deeper meaning. You may need to mine the dialogue and inject a good dose of your own life experience to discover the themes, but they're there to unwrap like professionally packaged Christmas presents.

The storyline has something to say about the power of good deeds. While the premise of the musical involves two army buddies going to the ends of the earth (or at least to Vermont) to repay the Old Man who kept them alive and well throughout the Army's campaign to bring down the Third Reich. Their plan?

Rehearse their new Broadway play at the General's Columbia Inn and have as many members of the 151st show up for the inaugural performance in order to save the inn from financial ruin. It is a message that's subtly reinforced through Count Your Blessings Instead Of Sheep. After Bob Wallace sings it to help her fall asleep, Susan passes along that sage

City Seeks Housing Options To Spark Growth

The City of Fort Myers is entering the second phase of a community redevelopment initiative that will potentially expand housing options and spark economic growth. The project is part of the city's ongoing partnership with the National Resource Network (NRN), a U.S. Government program designed to help communities facilitate economic recovery and growth.

The NRN project will focus on articulating a citywide vision for affordable and workforce housing through two project

Phase 1 of the NRN project was primarily investigative, and included a local housing market study, as well as a review of code enforcement systems and potential opportunities for growth. The NRN presented its Phase 1 findings at the November 22 Fort Myers City Council workshop, noting the needs for more affordable housing options and a broader range of housing choices throughout the city.

Phase 2 of the project was launched at the November 22 workshop. In the current phase, the NRN will focus on modeling a five-year housing strategy for the city, which will include identifying geographic target areas and community partners. The Phase 2 deliverables will also include the development of performance metrics.

The NRN was established by the White House Strong Cities, Strong Communities initiative, and is designed to help cities develop the tools and strategies needed to grow their local economies. The program is funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The city initially submitted for support from the NRN in 2015, in hopes of developing an infill housing and redevelopment program. The partnership was approved by City Council in January 2016 and NRN representatives presented a project update during the City Council workshop last month.

The second phase of the project is expected to be complete in February 2017.☆

Award Named In Honor Of Artist

ArtFest Fort Myers has added the $500 Ben Essenburg Award to the professional artist prizes. It is the festival's intention to honor this Florida wildlife artist who has contributed so much to the fine art festival since its inception.

Essenburg has been painting and exhibiting professionally since 1975 and was a key artist advisor in the early years of ArtFest Fort Myers. His incredible talent, generous nature and years of experience in the outdoor fine art festival venue made him uniquely qualified to provide valuable insights regarding the inner workings of a successful juried event.

As a tribute to his award-winning artistic talent, Essenburg is the only artist who has juried into and participated in ArtFest Fort Myers for a run of 13 consecutive years.

ArtFest Fort Myers takes place on February 3, 4 and 5 in the Fort Myers River District. The festival features 200 professional artists from across the county and around the world, the largest high school art exhibit and competition in south Florida and free interactive art experiences for children of all ages.

White Christmas

advice contained in the lyrics to her grandpa, the General, when he worries about how to dig the inn out of the financial morass he's gotten it into. Perhaps we'd all be better off focusing on the positive in our lives rather than souring our outlook by miring ourselves in the negativity that abounds in present-day society and culture. In fact, aren't we all responsible for contributing to the overall malaise and pessimism to varying degrees on way too many occasions?

Sami Doherty's scenes as a jealous Judy Haynes are priceless as she feeds her green-eyed monster every time social climbing Rita and Rhoda throw themselves at Phil. Of course, Judy herself could be viewed from the same metric, couldn't she? With foot atop Phil's prone body, she channels her inner Beyonce and tells her man that he better put a ring on her wagging finger. But does that really solve the problem when your man has a wandering eye and the position or celebrity to attract virtually any woman he wants?

But Betty Haynes provides, perhaps, one most poignant object lesson in the entire show. Is it Bob Wallace the man or the man she wants Bob Wallace to be the person she falls in love with? And if it's the latter, is there hope for a lasting, mutually-supportive relationship or is their love doomed to failure when he inevitably fails to measure up?

Oh, there are other themes and messages to take away from Irving Berlin's White Christmas, and that's yet another reason you should include this well-done, smartly staged musical on your holiday "must do" list.

Other standouts in this stellar production are Pauline Cobrda as Martha Watson (the General's right hand who actually runs the inn), Dale Given as General Henry Waverly, Tony Conaty as the ever-flummoxed dance captain, and Jim Hefferman as the hysterically understated Ezekiel Foster. But overall, Broadway Palm's White Christmas is entertainment and nostalgia served up with a spade full of snow!

Christmas Eve Services At New Hope Presbyterian Church

hristmas Eve Services at New Hope Presbyterian Church focus on the celebration of the coming of Jesus the Messiah over 2,000 years ago. All of their approximately one hour Christmas Eve services are candlelight with Senior Pastor Eddie Spencer sharing a Christmas message. Nursery will be

A family worship service, led by the Children's Ministry, will begin at 4 p.m. New Hope packs out for this annual event, so be sure to come early for the best seats. Music for this service will be Light of the World, a children's Christmas musical, along with the singing of carols. Children will lead in worship and song, while families gather for this worship tradition.

A traditional worship service, led by the church's traditional music team, starts at 6 p.m. All ages are welcome to attend. This more classical service uses a musical style common to churches throughout the ages. As we worship the coming of Jesus the Messiah, the focus is on the story of Jesus' coming to earth as a baby through organ, choir and other instrumentation.

At 8 p.m., a contemporary worship service will be led by New Hope's Praise Team. While the message does not change, the worship style for this service presents the Christmas story through more contemporary versions of the classics, as well as "off the charts" versions of contemporary Christmas favorites.

New Hope Presbyterian Church is a reformed church which seeks to obey the Great Commission through family ministry, worship, instruction and service. New Hope is located at 10051 Plantation Road in Fort Myers. Sunday worship services are 8 and 9:30 a.m. (traditional) and 11 a.m. (contemporary). Sunday morning classes are available for adults, youth and children. Nursery care is provided. For more information, call 274-1230 or visit www.newhopefortmyers.org.

The aquatic plant forms dense mats that limit biodiversity, recreation and commercial activity

Water-Lettuce

by Gerri Reaves

There may be disagreement among plant experts as to whether water-lettuce (Pistia stratiotes) is native to the United States. But one fact is not in dispute: This member of the arum family thrives in many states, including throughout Florida, and is officially labeled noxious or invasive in six of them.

The pretty aquatic plant has been in Florida since before 1765. Some experts state its origin as Africa or South America.

The Florida Exotic Pest Plant Council lists it as a category I invasive species.

Plants in that infamous category are defined as "invading and disrupting native plant communities." The classification is based on documented ecological damage.

If you need another reason not to include this species in your aquarium or water or bog garden, consider that the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services prohibits it, and it is illegal to possess in Florida without a special permit.

Water-lettuce is aptly named and easy to identify. Pale green fuzzy leaves measure up to six inches long and form a rosette. Thick and hairy with wavy edges, they can be spongy at the base. Parallel veins give the stalkless leaves a ridged appearance.

The fact that it looks like a floating open head of lettuce inspires the common name. Two other names are tropical duckweed and water bonnet.

The roots are feathery and the flowers inconspicuous. The single female flower is located beneath male flowers at the center of the basal rosette.

The plant produces a green berry with many cylindrical seeds.

Rosettes send out runners from which

new leaf clusters form.

Because the linking plants form heavy mats on freshwater rivers, lakes, canals and streams, it prevents recreational and commercial activity. It can block the mouths of rivers or proliferate so successfully that it blankets a lake shore to shore.

In optimal conditions, it can double its population size in less than three weeks.

It can reduce the oxygen levels and sunlight to such a degree that other species – such as fish and beneficial water plants – cannot thrive.

It also physically impedes wildlife that need it for habitat. Overall, it reduces biodiversity and chokes-up water ways.

Various control methods are ongoing in Florida, including mechanical removal or chopping, biocontrols and herbicides.

Boaters can help the fight by always cleaning boats before entering the water to prevent the transfer of plant fragments.

People who have aquariums should be sure not to buy water-lettuce and to dispose of any existing water-lettuce responsibly, i.e., so it cannot enter and spread in a waterway.

This plant has traditional medicinal uses, but despite the name, it's not highly recommended for consumption.

CROW Case Of The Week:

Eastern Indigo Snake

by Bob Petcher

here are hopes that the eastern indigo snake (Drymarchon couperi) is making a comeback on Sanibel & Captiva islands. The federally threatened species in Georgia and Florida has been involved in captive breeding at Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation and also part of the Pine Island Sound Eastern Indigo Snake Project that began in 2012.

The longest native snake species in the U.S. has had its difficulties in the southern region due to habitat loss. In fact, it had been regarded as extirpated -wiped out—on the islands before the two projects began. The PISEIS project involves a federal permit "to conduct a mark-capture study in Pine Island Sound to assess the population status, collect genetic samples and come up with recommendations to sustain these populations," according to SCCF's website.

Eastern indigo snakes average six to seven feet in length. They are nonvenomous, look similar in color to the black racer (there is some blue within the indigo's black hue), but are regarded as more intimidating due to their larger size. Many question why such a snake or a snake in general is bred. SCCF answers "conservation through education" as institutions, nature centers, organizations and individuals seek snakes for live exhibits and educational lectures on snake conservation to hopefully change the negativity surrounding the reptile. Each species does have a role in the environment.

Conservationists say eastern indigo snakes were more plentiful on the islands prior to the late 1980s. According to Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation Wildlife Habitat Management Director Chris Lechowicz, who is involved in both projects, the demise of the winterbreeding indigos is contributed to their being run over by vehicles on roads while actively searching for mates. The difference in both projects is described.

Wild Pine Island Sound indigo snakes are measured, marked and released soon after capture and are not bred in captivity," said Lechowicz. "Our captive bred indigo snakes are from a long line of legally acquired and propagated stock (likely originating from various parts of the range) and are given away to conservation organizations as educational tools for lectures and displays pushing snake conservation.

Before the projects, SCCF records indicated the last known indigo snake living on the islands was hit by a bicycle on the Indigo Trail (a trail named after the indigo snake) at the JN "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge in February 1999. That snake died at CROW shortly after. SCCF officials tried surveys, trapping protocols and educational programs that sought verification and documentation of remaining snakes from island residents, but those measures failed.

Through partnership with the nonprofit organization called the Orianne Society (an organization dedicated to the conservation of the eastern indigo snake), JNDDNWR, the Florida State Park system and volunteers collaborating with this research, there are currently 34 indigo snakes involved in the Pine Island Sound study from three islands. They are being pit-tagged and measured so a population estimate can be made and movements can be documented.

In 1965, Otto's son Gunter moved to Florida and started making his own Waltzing Waters fountain installations in Cape Coral.

embers and non-members are welcome to attend a birding outing on Saturday, December 10, beginning at 8 a.m. at Prairie Pines Preserve. There is no charge to attend but donations are appreciated. Prairie Pines Preserve, which includes 20 miles of hiking and equestrian trails and an ADA-accessible loop trail, is located at 18400 North Tamiami Trail (U.S. 41) in North Fort Myers. The area consists of many diverse native plant communities, including wet and mesic flatwoods, depression marshes, wet prairie and prairie hammock. Birds and wildlife commonly observed at this preserve include wood storks, red-headed woodpeckers and marsh rabbits.

The preserve is also one of the few Conservation 20/20 locations that include a paved parking area and restroom facilities. These amenities, as well as trail markers, interpretive signage and some exotics treatment, were made possible through a grant awarded by the Florida Communities Trust program.

The preserve's main entrance parking area is just north of Del Prado Boulevard on the east side of U.S. 41. Parking is free. Bring binoculars, sun protection, a bottle of drinking water and insect repellent.☆

Love Those Minus Tides

uper low water has always been one of my favorite set ups for catching fish. During these minus low tides, fish just stack up in big numbers in the deeper channels.

The first few hours of the low incoming tides this week had snook, jacks, grouper and even a few redfish just going off. Free lined live shiners and pinfish were the bait of choice for these . fish during this often crazy bite.

Shallow water gag grouper fishing can be a great option this time of year with this season remaining open until December 31. Many channel markers and local knowledge under water structures can hold good numbers of gags. Most of these grouper are under the 24-inch minimum but put on a great fight as they try to run back into the structure and break you off. This is full contact fishing; no other fish we target hits as hard as a grouper. Another option is trolling the ledges and drop offs in and around the passes with large-lipped diving plugs. Either method of dropping: a live bait or trolling, if you put your time, you will eventually get a keeper.

More and more sheepshead continue to show up with each cold front that passes through. Keeper sized and better can now be caught in and around the passes along with most intercostal docks. Small chunks of shrimp on a jig head or live fiddler crabs will get it done. Until water temperatures get a little cooler though, there are still lots of small mangrove snappers in these same places that are beating the sheepshead to the bait.

Snook season for our region of Florida came to an end December 1. As long as conditions remain warm though, I still target snook almost daily with my clients, enjoying this catch and release fishery most of our winter. If it's season or not, always handle snook as little as possible and avoid using a landing net, which knocks the protective slime coating off these fish. When releasing, keep your eyes open for hungry dolphin while releasing them as they often crash your snook catching party. When they do, it's time to leave.

Unexpected afternoon rains proved a little challenging a few times this week and caused either rescheduled or shorter trips than planned. Even during the often windy conditions, as long as the tide was moving, fishing in the sound proved very consistent. Water conditions on the gulf side are still looking funky, with a weird sheen on the surface and a noticeable lack of bird and bait activity within a few miles of the beaches. This is probably from the red tide offshore, while the sound just gets clearer and prettier by the day.

Capt. Matt Mitchell has been fishing local waters since he moved to Sanibel in 1980. He now lives in St. James City and works as a back country fishing guide. If you have comments or questions email captmattmitchell@aol. com.₩

JACQUELYN ANN RAUSCHERT

ibrant, loving and witty Jackie of Sanibel joined her WWII "Flying Ace" husband of 71 years, Richard, at the highest of heights on Saturday, November 26. She passed at Hope Hospice from Myelodysplastic Anemia. Loved by so many for her giving nature, her storytelling, her from the heart" home cooking and baking, she had a great desire for everyone to be happy, consequently making everyone feel at home.

Born in Chicago, educated at North

Park University, she made a life with her craftsman builder husband, Dick, in the Chicagoland area where she raised three children. In her midlife years, she managed the jewelry department at Lord & Taylor of Schaumburg. At the age of 55, they retired from the Windy City to sunny Sanibel and built their last home. On the island, they found tranquility, nature and a wonderful escape from the brutal winters of Chicago.

Jackie was an avid lover of history, who also loved to read and converse. She was one of the original docents at the Sanibel Historical Village. She was actively involved in its evolution, working on preserving authenticity through displays and conducting tours. She ultimately became the official "scheduler" of the docents for over 20 years. She spent countless hours coordinately the volunteers, filling shifts daily, thus keeping the museum running smoothly to serve the visiting public. She was nicknamed "Telephone Jackie" for all her efforts. She remained attached to the wonderful women who all contributed their time to the early village days. These ladies became known as the "Ladies of the 80s." Jackie so loved the monthly luncheon get-togethers with this very special group of retired docents who contributed so much in preserving Sanibel's heritage.

Jackie's favorite pastimes included collecting antiques, decorating, being creative, traveling, baking, getting books from the Captiva library, picnics on the Causeway and Bowman's Beach, daily crossword puzzles, visiting with neighbors and playing "rummy" with her grandchildren. She also enjoyed watching and placing small bets with friends on the Kentucky Derby. She was thrilled by the World Series victory of the Chicago Cubs. She would often recount how she snuck out of school early to attend "Ladies Day at Wrigley" in her youth. But most of all, her family was always her priority, and her grandchildren were her greatest joy in life.

She is survived by her three children, Robin Bernardi, Thomas Rauschert, Nancy Kula (Joseph) and three grandchildren, Richard Bernardi (Season), Dr. Joseph Kula (Dr. Katie) and Hilary Davis (Andrew).

Jackie was an exemplary testament to the "Greatest Generation" and a tribute to its values. A "Class Act" of integrity, honesty, hard work, devotion and sacrifice. She will be greatly missed by those she touched.

A private family memorial will take place in her home. The family wishes to express their deepest gratitude to FISH of Sanibel and Hope Hospice. They would prefer any donations in honor of Jacquelyn Rauschert be sent to these wonderful, vital organizations.

Indigo Snake

One of the pit-tagged snakes from 2013 – an adult male eastern indigo snake – was brought to CROW from Sanibel on November 26. It was found with several abrasions and punctures over the majority of its body.

"Fortunately, the wounds are not life-threatening, and the snake will be released," said CROW DVM intern Dr. Spencer Kehoe. "If it had not been rescued, the wounds would have most likely become infected in the wild which might have resulted in death. We believe the wounds are from a domestic animal such as a dog and not a predator just by the nature of the puncture wounds."

CROW medical staff cleaned the snake's wounds with saline and applied bandages to the affected areas. The approximately 7-foot, 5.75-pound indigo will continue to receive wound management until the wounds granulate in and skin sheds.

The snake is currently receiving daily bandage changes and wound care treatment. Tissue is looking healthy and scabbing over well. Once the snake goes through a couple sheds it will then be released," Kehoe confirmed.

An eastern indigo snake, an offspring of the Pine Island Sound Eastern Indigo Snake Project, is now on exhibit at CROW. SCCF hatched a group of babies from that species in July 2015. CROW received a female from that litter in April 2016, and she is now a permanent resident at the clinic.

CROW Education Coordinator

Rachel Rainbolt stated the captive-bred snake is doing well. Partnerships like the one between SCCF and CROW aid in conservation and education efforts.

"People are usually afraid of snakes so having the eastern indigo snake as an animal ambassador has been a great introduction to reducing people's fears, Rainbolt said. "The snake makes people more comfortable once they learn it is non-venomous and docile in nature.

"Education is a core part of CROW's mission so it's rewarding to see people view snakes as beautiful wild creatures and not something fearful and threatening."

Florida Native Joins Shark Shootout

by Ed Frank

or the 16th consecutive year, Golf Hall of Famer Greg Norman has assembled many of the greatest professional golfers in the world who will compete here this weekend in the Franklin Templeton Shark Shootout at the Tiburon Golf

The 24-player field features 112 career PGA Tour victories and seven – yes, that's right – seven LPGA championships.

For only the second time in the long history of this tournament, the field includes an LPGA champion, Florida native Lexi Thompson, who joins Annika Sorenstam as just the second woman to compete in the shootout.

The 21-year-old Thompson, with seven career wins in her resume, is ranked as the top American golfer in the LPGA and fourth overall in the world. At just 16 years old, she won the Navistar LPGA, the youngest golfer in history to win a LPGA tour event.

The unique makeup of the shootout, considered the premier tournament of the post-season schedule, consists of 12 two-person teams who will compete for the $3.1 million purse, with the winning team splitting first-place winnings of

Returning to defend their 2015 title are Jason Dufner and Brandt Snedeker. They are one of four teams in the field that are past shootout champions, the others being Harris English and Matt Kuchar, Sean O'Hair and Kenny Perry, and Jerry Kelly and Steve Stricker.

English and Kuchar were the 2013 champions, and followed up with secondplace finishes in both 2014 and 2015.

The three days of competition begins Thursday with a scramble, followed by modified alternate shots Friday and better ball in the Saturday finale.

The Golf Channel will televise the first two days of competition from 2 to 5 p.m. with Saturday's final round on FOX from 1 to 5 p.m.

Of disappointment to Norman and the tournament sponsors was the withdrawal a few days ago of Davis Love, the popular captain of this year's U.S. Ryder Cup team champions. A hip injury caused his cancellation. He was replaced by Mike Weir, the 2003 Masters champion.

The following is a listing of the two-person teams that will compete here this

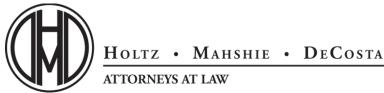

Jason Dufner and Brandt Snedeker; Jerry Kelly and Steve Stricker; Mike Weir and Gary Woodland; Kevin Chappell and Kevin Kisner; Charley Hoffman and Billy Horschel; Daniel Berger and K.J. Choi; Luke Donald and Russell Knox; Harris English and Matt Kuchar; Bryson DeChambeau and Lexi Thompson; Sean O'Hair and Kenny Perry; Charles Howell III and Rory Sabbatini; Smylie Kaufman and Justin Thomas.

Globetrotters To Perform In Town

s the Harlem Globetrotters prepare to bring their 2017 World Tour to Lathe Germain Arena in Fort Myers on Friday, February 24 at 7 p.m., the team took a timeout for Guinness World Records Day.

Only one year after setting seven official world records, the team broke a single-day total of nine records this year.

Tickets to see the Globetrotters in Fort Myers start at $25.50 and are on sale at www.harlemglobetrotters.com or at the Germain Arena box office, located at 11000 Everblades Parkway in Estero. Additional fees may apply.

The records were broken at the AT&T Center, home of the San Antonio Spurs, during the 12th annual Guinness World Records Day, a global celebration launched to note the day the Guinness World Records book sold its 100 millionth copy.

Since 2000, the Globetrotters own 15 current Guinness World Records.

"We are the original trick shot artists, so it is great to reclaim our records and re-establish our dominance," said Harlem Globetrotters star Big Easy Lofton. "We have been training hard, so to have a day where we push the limits and try some fun yet challenging shots, is pretty cool. I mean, how many people can say they're a Guinness World Records title holder? We can't wait to put smiles on people's faces as we demonstrate our skills and talents on the upcoming world

Among the nine records set by the Globetrotters, four of them reclaimed records that were originally held by the team and then broken by Dude Perfect. The Globetrotters reclaimed the records of longest basketball hook shot, longest basketball shot blindfolded, most basketball 3-pointers made by a pair in one minute and longest blindfolded basketball hook shot.

The records set:

- Longest basketball hook shot -Big Easy Lofton (72 feet, 6.25 inches) Longest basketball shot blindfolded
- Ant Atkinson (73 feet, 10 inches) • Most basketball 3-pointers in one
- minute (single ball) Ant Atkinson and Cheese Chisholm (10 each)
- Farthest basketball shot made while sitting on the court – Thunder Law (58 feet, 9.25 inches)
- Most bounced basketball 3-pointers in one minute – Zeus McClurkin (5)
- Most basketball 3-pointers made by a pair in one minute – Ant Atkinson and Cheese Chisholm (22 each)
- Farthest basketball shot under one leg – Thunder Law (52 feet, 5.5 inches)
- Longest blindfolded basketball hook shot - Big Easy Lofton (58 feet, 2.5 inches)
- Most basketball slam dunks in one minute (individual) – Zeus McClurkin

The Globetrotters will tip off their 2017 World Tour on December 26 and will play in over 250 North American markets as well as 30 countries worldwide.

Throughout their history, the original Harlem Globetrotters have showcased their talents in 122 countries and territories on six continents. Inductees of the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame, the Globetrotters have entertained hundreds of millions of fans - among them popes, kings, queens and presidents - over nine decades.

that they must complete an English project for school. Through the words of a classic piece of literature, the two realize that they are more connected than they thought. Gunderson explores the mysteries of life and love in a way that will leave you reeling at the end.

"I And You is one of those rare plays that made me wonder and gasp aloud when I read it," said artistic director Annette Trossbach. "It is the charming unfolding of a sweet relationship between two 17-year-old students and an ensuing mystic revelation. In the holiday season, this play offers themes of hope, charity and a reminder that the circle of life encompasses so much more than we know."

I And You stars two accomplished young actors; Mike Edouard, previously seen in Twelfth Night at Lab Theater and in Romeo & Juliet at Florida Rep, and Eren Sisk, who makes her Lab Theater debut.

"I And You is a show that stays with you. The first time I read it, it simply took my breath away," said director Lauren Redeker. "Having the opportunity to be a part of this play at all, much less as its director, is such an honor. When the lights go down, I hope you feel the same way I did when I first read these lines... needing to catch your breath."

I And You opens on Friday, December 9, with a reception at 7:15 p.m. Performances are on December 9, 10, 15, 16, 17, 22 and 23 at 8 p.m. and on December 10, 11, 17 and 18 at 2 p.m.

Individual tickets are $25 for adults and $12 for students at the door. All tickets are available at http://LaboratoryTheaterFlorida.com.

Season tickets are $150 for adults, valid for one admission for one performance during each run as well as staged readings and speaker series events; $105 for seniors and military (age 65 and up or with valid active duty or retired military ID) for use on Thursdays only during main season (October to April). The theater also offers a Snowbird Ticket for $70, valid for main stage shows and staged readings from January 1 through April 30, 2017.

Time For A Year-End Investment Review

by Jennifer Basey

ith the holiday season upon us, you may well be busier than usual. However, by spending a few minutes reviewing your investment scenario of this past year, you can see where you've been, where you might be going, and what you need to do to keep moving forward toward your long-term financial goals.

So, as you look back at 2016, pay close attention to these elements of your investment picture:

- Performance Reviewing your investment performance over time is important in helping you determine if you're on track to achieve your financial goals. So, in evaluating how your investments did in 2016, ask yourself some key questions: How did your investments do relative to their performance in past years? If there was a big difference, what might have accounted for it? Were your returns relevant to your long-term goals? In other words, if you have already established a return rate you'll need to reach your goals - and you should indeed set such a rate - were your actual returns "on track" to help you make progress toward your objectives? And, just as importantly, were your return expectations realistic, based on your investment mix and the market environment?
- Investment mix If you are a diligent investor following a well-designed strategy, you probably started out in 2016 with an investment mix that reflects your risk tolerance, time horizon, and short- and long-term goals. But over time, your investment mix can change, even without your having done so on purpose. If you owned a certain percentage of an asset, such as growth stocks, and those stocks appreciated in price substantially, they could take up a larger percentage of your portfolio than you had intended, thereby exposing you to a higher risk level than that with which you are comfortable. So now that the year is coming to a close, examine your investment mix to see if it needs "rebalancing."

- Contribution levels Are you taking full advantage of your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan? Specifically, if you got a raise this past year, did you boost your contributions to your plan? The more you invest now, and throughout your working life, the less likely it will be that you have to play "catch up" in the years immediately preceding your retirement.
- Mistakes We all make mistakes in every walk of life, including the way we invest. In looking back over 2016, can you spot some investment mistakes you might have made? Did you temporarily "bail out" on investing immediately after the "Brexit" vote, only to find, a few weeks later, that the markets had soared to record highs? Did you act on impulse and buy a so-called "hot" stock that turned out to be inappropriate for your needs and risk level? While mistakes like these might be costly in the short term, they can ultimately prove invaluable – if you learn from them.

We're just about ready to turn the page on the 2016 calendar. So, as you review your investment decisions for the past year, try to determine what worked, what didn't – and what you can do to improve your results in 2017.

Retailer Supports United Way

n the eve of the recent Giving Tuesday, United Way announced that it collected 70 percent of its $9.65 million dollar goal. Giving Tuesday is a great way for the community to focus on helping neighbors and share in the holiday spirit by giving back to those most in need.

Chico's FAS recently concluded its United Way fundraising campaign, which included welcoming two new members to the Alexis de Tocqueville Society. Chico's FAS ranks third in Lee County as a United Way Pacesetter company and has raised $250,000 for the 2016-17 United Way campaign. This level of leadership giving is reflected by the company's year-round commitment to United Way of Lee, Hendry, Glades and Okeechobee.

Giving Tuesday is a global giving movement in all 50 states and in 70 countries around the world. Since its founding in 2012, millions of people have come together to support and champion the causes they believe in and the communities in which they live. After two days of getting deals – Black Friday and Cyber Monday – Giving Tuesday is a good day for giving back.

Businesses like Chico's FAS run employee fundraising campaigns, volunteer, and offer support through in-kind donations to United Way year round.

"Our pledge this year to the United Way has a significant impact serving the most critical needs in Southwest Florida. It's truly amazing how one pledge can help change the lives of so many people," said Shelley Broader, president and CEO of Chico's FAS, Inc.

Employees give at all levels, from a few dollars per paycheck to participating in United Way Leadership Giving that ranges from $1,000 for Keel Club members to $10,000+ for the Alexis de Tocqueville Society. Giving back isn't always about the money. This year, more than 60 Chico's FAS employees participated in United Way's Day of Caring, volunteering at United Way children's agencies, an abuse shelter, and our local food bank. Recently, employees also spent a day packing meals with the help of United Way Partner Agency, Meals of Hope.

"Chico's FAS is a proud supporter of the United Way's Day of Caring. It's eye-opening to see the need in our community, and we're proud that in just one day our associates packed over 13,000 meals to help feed 2,500 local families," said Jessica Wells, vice president, public relations and corporate communications for Chico's FAS, Inc.

Chico's FAS employees also volunteer and participate in the United Way's Allocation process, which determines how dollars are distributed to the United Way Partner Agencies. In addition, each year Chico's hosts the Allocations Volunteer Appreciation Breakfast at its Metro Parkway headquarters.

"Chico's FAS is an extraordinary supporter of the United Way of Lee, Hendry, Glades, and Okeechobee. Not only do the company and the employees give generously to the annual United Way Campaign, but they give of themselves by volunteering for so many United Way Partner Agencies that need their help. A heartfelt 'thank you' to Chico's FAS," said Cliff Smith, president of the United Way of Lee, Hendry, Glades and Okeechobee.

What's Your Number?

J. Brendan Ryan, CLU, ChFC, MSFS

emember the ad on television where the commentator kept asking people what their number was? It was suggesting that each person needs to know the amount of money to have on hand at retirement in order to maintain one's standard of living during retirement,

It is a reasonable question to ask but not an easy one to answer. And the further you are from retirement, the less accurate the calculated number will be. Variables, such as salary progression through the years, inflation, changes in one's standard of living, change in marital status, etc., can influence that number and are hard to reckon with early on.

But some commentators have some helpful information. Vickie Bajtelsmit is a lawyer and college professor. Anne Rappaport is an actuary. They published a paper, When Should You Claim Social Security? in the January 2015 issue of the Journal of Financial Services Professionals. Besides answering the question asked in their paper's title, they provide guidance on establishing that magic number needed for a couple to achieve a comfortable retirement, citing a 2013 study performed by the Society of Actuaries. They rightly posit that that magic number depends on when one starts Social Security.

They explain that the earliest one can receive Social Security retirement benefits is at age 62, that normal retirement age is now age 66 or 67, depending on year of birth, and that one can delay taking Social Security until age 70. The longer one waits to claim the benefits, the more the monthly check will be.

They use as their examples two couples, all age 62. Couple A had a combined income of $60,000 and accumulated wealth outside of their residence of $100,000. Couple B had a combined income of $105,000 plus $250,000 of wealth outside of their residence. The commentators made certain reasonable assumptions too complex to review here and ran a Monte Carlo simulation to determine the probability that a certain level of savings will allow a comfortable retirement (in light of their pre-retirement income) through life expectancy.

Couple A: They found that, if Couple A both retired at age 62 and started to collect Social Security at age 62, a nest egg of $383,000 would give them a 50 percent likelihood of meeting their needs to life expectancy. A 90 percent likelihood would require a nest egg of $520,000. If they put off retirement and the start of Social Security until age 70, the required nest egg would be only $278,000 for the 50 percent probability level and $427,000 for the 90 percent probability.

Couple B: Assuming that they both retired and started Social Security at age 62, Couple B would need a nest egg of $918,000 to be 50 percent confident and $1.2 million to be 90 percent confident of maintaining their pre-retirement standard of living. If they do not retire and claim until age 70, those numbers drop to $707,000 and $988,000 respectively.

Observations:

• These calculations do not factor in the effects of extreme financial shocks, such as living well beyond life expectancy, extremely poor market performance, or very high costs of long-term care.

• If the required nest eggs are out of reach for a given couple, no need to despair. Adjusting down one's standard of living during retirement is always possible.

• To get a better handle on what your Social Security benefits are, you can find information based on your actual Social Security participation by going to www.

They Left Us Éverything

by Di Saggau

friend of mine on Sanibel recently gave me a book her bookclub had discussed in West Virginia during the summer. It's They Left Us Everything, a memoir by Plum Johnson, a Canadian author. What a delightful read. It's funny and it's heart-wrenching, a meditation on aging, grief and our responsibilities to family. I could relate to so many episodes in the book because a few years ago, along with my siblings, we went through our mother's "treasures" in much the same way Plum's siblings did. I am the oldest of five, as is Plum, and like her, I also lost a brother, so it was easy for me to relate with her.

After almost 20 years of caring for elderly parents, first for their senile father, and then for their cantankerous 93-year-old mother, Plum and her three younger brothers have conflicted feelings of grief and relief. When it comes time to empty and sell the beloved family home, 23 rooms bulging with history, antiques and oxygen tanks, Plum thinks, "How tough will that be? I know how to buy garbage bags

Plum had planned to spend six months untangling the many scraps of paper left in pockets, family photos and everything else that was left behind after her mother died. Instead, she spent 16 months separating trash from treasure accumulated during mum and dad's combined lifetimes of more than 180 years. Dad had preceded mum in death.

I was sure that the message of the book, judging from the title, would be for parents to clean up their own mess before they depart this world. Just the opposite. Plum says wait until your children are old enough to appreciate it and then leave them everything.

We learn about her siblings, her parents and other family members. Mum, in her younger days, was an advertising copywriter for Macy's, coming up with phrases like, "Dress for one man, not for many," and, "Live on a budget but look as if you didn't." Dad was in the military serving, among other places, in India and

Plum struggled in her relationship with her mother. Through her mother's letters, she learns about her parents' life together, the good and the bad. She gains a greater insight as to what her mother was really like. She even discovers a letter her mother wrote to her but never gave her. She found it while going through things, and the letter brought tears of joy. The crankiness she experienced with her mum during her final years recedes from her memory and she gains more empathy and understanding. She sees now that old people are simply young people locked

I loved the way for 20 years, she and her brothers would get together two or three times a year for group therapy. During their "Sibling Suppers," they would discuss mum and dad with good food, the best wine and laughter that lasted all night. What a great idea.

There is a lot of humor in the book. I loved the section talking about how, as children, if they misbehaved at the dinner table, they were told to stand in the corner of the kitchen where they would pick at the wallpaper. Years later, as they empty the house, they discover that the leafy green toile of red-coated fisherman casting their flies over rivers, shows that halfway up the wall, all the fishing rods have their tips picked off. They Left Us Everything is a warm, heartfelt memoir.

School Smart

by Shelley M. Greggs, NCSP

ear Shelley, Му son is in miďdle school now, and I'm having difficulty getting any information from him about his day at school, what happened and so forth. I know that both good and some bad things are happening, yet I don't want to grill or nag him with incessant questions. Any ideas on how to make him more talkative?

Serena T., Fort Myers

Serena,

You are experiencing a very common problem - teenagers tend to talk less with their parents when asked to converse "on demand." In reality, teenagers want to converse with their parents but often in a different setting or different format and usually on their

Elena Aguilar, a teacher, coach and leader in education, has some recommendations for parents on this concern. She wants parents to observe the situation and understand how and when they ask their kids questions. She says that parents should ask during a time when they have the ability to focus so that their child feels they have your full attention. Once you get an understanding of when the optimal time for questions is, (for many parents it seems to be in the car and at dinner) don't pepper them with tons of questions, ask just a couple and let them talk. After a while, you'll figure out which questions elicit the most meaningful responses. Aquilar's suggestions for questions that will work with most age groups, perhaps with some wording modifications, are as

1. Tell me about a moment today when you felt excited about what you were learning.

2. Tell me about a moment in class when you felt confused.

3. Think about what you learned and did in school today. What's something you'd like to know more about? What's a question you have that came from your learning today?

4. Were there any moments today when you felt worried? When you felt scared?

5. Were there any times today when you felt disrespected by anyone? Tell me about those moments.

6. Were there times today when you felt that one of your classmates demonstrated care for you?

7. Were there any moments today when you felt proud of yourself?

8. Tell me about a conversation vou had with a classmate or friend that you enjoyed.

9. What was challenging about your day?

10. What do you appreciate about your day?

11. What did you learn about yourself today?

12. Is there anything that you'd like to talk about that I might be able to help you figure out?

13. Is there anything you're worried about?

14. What are you looking forward to tomorrow?

15. Is there a question you wish I'd ask you about your day?

She also has some excellent suggestions, listed below, for parents in regard to their communication style and intentions. These are particularly useful for expanding your conversations and getting a true picture of how your child is feeling as well as what they're doing.

• Don't interrupt. This is a good rule for any conversation, but especially if you want to get a lot of information out of a kid.

 Ask for more. Simply say, "I'd love to hear more about that..." Or, "Can you expand on that a little?"

• Ask about feelings. After a child describes an experience, ask, "How did you feel in that moment? What did you notice about your feelings?'

• Validate feelings. Whatever your kid feels is normal and OK. Let them know that. Feelings are OK. Tell them

• Tell them it's not OK for teachers or kids to be unkind or mean. If they tell you a story about a teacher who velled or disrespected them (regardless of what they said or did), let them know that it's not OK for an adult to treat them that way. Same goes for how they are treated by other children.

• Thank them for sharing with you. Always appreciate their honesty and willingness to share the highlights and bright spots, as well as the difficult moments. This will fuel their confidence in telling you more.

By following these excellent ideas, you can help improve the conversations between you and your child to be more meaningful, positive and powerful.

Funds Going To Children's Behavioral Health

ne in 10 children struggle with a mental health condition before the age of 10. Locally and across the country, there is a lack of resources for children in need of mental health care and this year, SWFL Children's Charities, Inc. is dedicating its fund-a-cause dollars to the pediatric behavioral health initiative at Golisano Children's Hospital of Southwest Florida to help give local children access to quality mental health care services.

"It's no longer a taboo subject," said Christin Collins, co-chair of the Southwest Florida Wine & Food Fest. "Children's behavioral and mental healthcare is complex, and it's heartbreaking for the children and families who are suffering. This need is underserved and has reached a crisis point.

"Mental healthcare must become a priority for children in our community," Collins continued. "The mission of the SWFL Children's Charities is to advance healthcare services available to children in our region, and we have a huge responsibility to lead the way for improving access to care for children and families who are suffering with mental illness in Southwest Florida."

An estimated 46,000 local children currently or have had a seriously debilitating mental disorder. Reimbursement rates for behavioral and mental health make it difficult for healthcare providers to meet the current and growing demands for services. More than two-thirds of the pediatric patient population in Southwest Florida is Medicaid and low income.

"The pediatric behavioral health initiative at Golisano Children's Hospital is building a foundation for excellence in caring for the mental health needs for the children and families of our area, and the support of SWFL Children's Charities, Inc. will bring tremendous resources to boost our efforts," said Dr.

Denise Dutchak-Parmenter of Golisano Children's Hospital.

"Mental illness crosses all boundaries and affects every aspect of a child's functioning, whether it's a complex medical condition, their school performance or their family and friends. Our goal is to allow patients to access a multi-layered approach through individual group and family therapies, and coordinate with schools and their primary care doctors to promote the patient's best and optimal functioning now and for their lifetime. As our patient population grows, we anticipate the addition of providers and services dedicated to the advancement of mental healthcare in our community.

The pediatric behavioral health initiative at Golisano Children's Hospital treats a wide spectrum of behavioral and mental health needs, including psychiatric diagnoses such as ADHD, anxiety and mood disorders, autism and psychosis.

"Philanthropy will be the only way organizations like Golisano Children's Hospital will be able to create and sustain programs and services to support the needs of children in our community with behavior and mental disorders," said Collins. "Donations to the auction's fund-a-cause will support the establishment of this region's first comprehensive behavioral and mental health counseling program, as well as patient and family navigation programs."

The two-day Southwest Florida Wine & Food Fest includes private chef vintner dinners on Friday, February 24, and The Grand Tasting and Live Auction on Saturday, February. 25 at Miromar Lakes Beach & Golf Club, located at 10160 Miromar Lakes Boulevard.

The annual event has raised $16 million over the past eight years, and SWFL Children's Charities, Inc. donates 100 percent of the proceeds to three local beneficiaries, Golisano Children's Hospital of Southwest Florida, Florida SouthWestern State College and Florida Gulf Coast University.

Golf Tournament Raises $40,000 For Hospice

he Club at Shell Point recently hosted 144 golfers for the 13th annual Shell Point Open Golf Tournament, which raised $42,000. Presented by The Legacy Foundation at Shell Point, along with title cosponsors Wright Construction Group and FineMark National Bank & Trust, the 18-hole scramble began with a continental breakfast and patriotic salute in honor of Veterans Day.

Golfers finished at the clubhouse with a silent auction, tournament prize announcements, and a full, catered luncheon by Executive Chef Richard Brown of The Club at Shell Point.

Between the great course conditions and beautiful weather, this golf tournament brought a smile to my face," said Marcia Seeland, Shell Point resident and longtime tournament participant.

"I love the new clubhouse – I feel so spoiled. We look forward to many more rounds of golf here," said Dawn Heintzelman, Shell Point resident and tournament golfer.

5 Minute Health Hacks

by Suzy Cohen, RPh

ear Readers: following are simple health hacks. Pimple- Put a dab of essential oil of tea tree on it. Or put a dab of bentonite clay on it (mixed with water); you want a clay paste. You can do both back to back (tea tree then clay mask). You can leave the dab on there overnight.

Foot cramp or Charlie horse- If these ailments are just occasional from over-stretching or dehydration, long travel, wearing high heels too long and so forth, just buy coconut water and drink it. The electrolytes work to stop the cramps and spasms. You can do this right before bedtime if it's frequent. Any electrolyte drink will work, unfortunately commercial drinks mostly contain artificial colors.

Kitchen cuts and wounds- Cayenne powder, the spice, is a well-known hemostat so it stops bleeding within seconds. Outdoor survivalists know this and often have it in their backpack, but what about the rest of us? It's amazing that you can pour this onto a cut and within 10 seconds, the bleeding will pretty much stop. I found this out when I cut some crusty bread and the knife slipped onto my finger. The water from the faucet wasn't helping, nor any of the shameful words I mumbled while hopping from one foot to another.... so I poured some cayenne pepper on the cut and took a deep breath waiting for a burn. Surprisingly, no pain, but it did control the bleeding. Super cool for a hot pepper

Headache- Sometimes a cup of coffee or black tea will help because of the caffeine, and you can also add two ibuprofen. If that doesn't help, then take a cool pack and put it on both your temples and take 250 to 350 mg of chelated magnesium.

Hangover- Truthfully, I have no experience with this one as my drinking habits amount to probably one drink (or a few sips of one drink), about three times a year. I just don't like feeling 'messed up' in my head, and it causes insomnia for me. But lots of my friends drink, and some get hangovers. I suggest you take two N-acetylcysteine supplements (approximately 1200 mg of NAC) and also a B1 (thiamine) tablet with your drinks or in the morning. There's a biochemical reasion for why this works better than drinking raw eggs or sweating in a sauna, just take my word for it.

Dry, chapped lips- Drink more, always infuse your water with marshmallow root (keep it in the fridge) and apply honey to your lips (instead of lip gloss). You're more kissable that way too. I have a much longer version of this article with more five minute health hacks, it's free at my website, and now here's the last hack for a cold.

Stuffy nose- Take a hot shower so it is steamy in there and dump a few drops of essential oil of eucalyptus on your shower floor. This allows you to gently inhale the steam infused with a known decongestant. Basil essential oil is a good expectorant.

Staying Healthy During The Holidays

Sylvia

by Ross Hauser, MD and Marion Hauser, MS, RD

e all know that weight gain comes with the holidays. Unhealthy habits can start with overindulging in Halloween candy, leading to overeating at Thanksgiving and other holiday meals, workplace snacks and parties, and family holiday reunions.

Resist the urge to overindulge in candy and sugar-laden drinks and sweets. Instead, create positive, healthier meal, snack and dessert choices that you can look forward to feasting on during the season. Snack on roasted pumpkin seeds, create meals that include squash, and enjoy desserts made with baked apples. Eating fresh, organic in-season food items provides a richness that your body will love. Don't settle for processed foods loaded with artificial ingredients.

Plan ahead by creating a healthy meal schedule. Make sure your refrigerator and pantry are stocked with fresh, nutrientdense foods. It is way too tempting to eat all of the leftover pie at home, or cookies brought to the office. Having a plan and sticking to it avoids developing unhealthy patterns.

Get moving! We sound like a broken record. But seriously, keeping your weight stable is a lot easier when you exercise. It also helps keep you more cheerful by counteracting the stress of holiday travel, traffic, shopping, and other events. If you are currently sedentary, then there is nowhere to go but up! If you currently exercise, but don't feel the benefits, you may be exercising too frequently in the "gray zone." In other words, your hard workouts are not hard enough. And your recovery workouts are not slow enough. Most Americans fit in the sedentary category – they do not do any form of regular exercise. Muscle burns more calories than fat. Enough said, right? You may even want to set a goal, such as completing a 5K - it's only 3.1 miles... you can do it!

Mom And Me

by Lizzie and Pryce

izzie and Pryce answer your questions and give advice about aging concerns from a twogenerational perspective. A mother and daughter team, Lizzie is a retired RN and health educator, and Pryce is a licensed psychotherapist in private practice who specializes in the care of elders and people with chronic illnesses.

Dear Mom & Me,

My husband is 25 years my senior. Our first child was born a year after our marriage and the second child 18 months later. These children were our interest completely, and we both enjoyed the journey. They are now both happy, successful adults.

We retired 10 years ago and now without the "children," we have little in common. My husband goes his way with his interests and I go mine in a totally different direction. I maintain the house and do all of the grocery shopping and maintenance, and when he is home he reads. We do eat together, then go our separate ways to our own TVs and then go to bed on our own private schedules.

We still are very involved with the children as they are not married. This doesn't seem too great, but I guess it's "widow-in-training" for me. Do others have lives like ours?

Dear Sylvia,

Your husband must be very strong, and have lived a very healthful lifestyle.

Most marriages don't have a 25-year age difference, and that in itself would make for different interests. Your children have been very fortunate to have loving, devoted parents caring for them, but they have grown up.

Retirement is different for many couples. If you have your interests and he has his and you both have the adult children in common, that is more than most people would consider happiness. You seem to have worked out a compromise that is satisfactory to both. Enjoy.

Lizzie

Dear Sylvia,

Raising a family requires a lot of time and attention, as we know. During this time, many events can occur. The husband and wife become so involved with the children, and the children's multiple activities, or the husband and wife were not very well matched prior to children, however, derived their happiness and joy individually from raising the children.

There are other scenarios as well, but each situation has similar endings after the kids are out of the home. One morning, you look over the top of your newspaper at someone you do not know or want to know.

It seems you have three choices: to do nothing, to improve the relationship and stay together or to decide to end the marriage. So, you have a lot of thinking to do. Perhaps some sessions with a counselor would be a great start.

Autism Screening

olisano Children's Hospital of Southwest Florida, in partnership with Ronald McDonald House Charities of Southwest Florida, offers a free monthly autism spectrum disorder screening for toddlers 18 months to five years of age.

The next screening on the Ronald McDonald Care Mobile will be held on Friday, December 16 from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Dunbar Jupiter Hammon Public Library, located at 3095 Blount Street in Fort Myers.

It is estimated that one in every 68 children is diagnosed with some form of autism spectrum disorder, making it more common than childhood cancer, juvenile diabetes and pediatric AIDS combined.

Medical consultants for the project stress that an early diagnosis can make a vast difference for toddlers and their families. They say early intensive behavioral intervention can make an immense difference not just in the development of the child, but in their families as well.

Screenings are conducted by the hospital and are administered by an advanced registered nurse practitioner, who has extensive training and experience in typical child development and developmental disorders.

A physician referral is not required. To schedule a screening, call 343-6838.₩

My Stars ★★★★

FOR WEEK OF DECEMBER 12, 2016

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Make your holiday preparations one step at a time in order to avoid being overwhelmed and leaving things undone. That confusing family situation continues to work itself out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Ease this year's holiday money pressures by letting your thrifty side guide you as you look for those perfect gifts that typically reflect your good taste and love of beauty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll have a good handle on potential holiday problems if you delegate tasks to family members, friends or co-workers – most of whom will be more than happy to help out.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Right now you are especially vulnerable to holiday scams that seek to take advantage of your generosity. Best advice: Check them out before you send out your checks.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The upcoming holiday season gives the Big Cat much to purr about. Relationships grow stronger, and new opportunities loom on the horizon, just waiting to be pounced on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A changing situation brings conflicting advice about how to go forward with your holiday plans. Your best bet: Make the decision you feel most comfortable with.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Holiday plans get back on track after some confusion about the direction you expected to take. A potentially troublesome money matter needs your immediate attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your holiday preparations are on track. But you need to confront a personal situation while you can still keep it from overwhelming everything else.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Tight financial matters ease a bit during this holiday season. But the sagacious Sagittarian is well-advised to keep a tight hold on the reins while shopping for oifts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't put off making decisions about this year's holiday celebrations, despite the negative comments you've been getting from several quarters. Do it NOW!

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February

18) The holidays will bring new friends and new opportunities. Meanwhile, be careful to use your energy wisely as you go about making holiday preparations.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) There's good news coming from a most unlikely source. And it could turn out to be one of the best holiday gifts you have had in years. Remember to stay positive.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are respected for your honesty and loyalty. You make friends slowly – but with rare exceptions, they're in your life forever.

THIS WEEK IN HISTORY

- On Dec. 13, 1621, the first American fur exports leave for England aboard the Fortune, only to be stolen by the French. The colonists later traded with Native Americans, exchanging corn for beaver skins, which were in turn sold in England.
- On Dec. 18, 1777, the new United States celebrates its first national day of thanksgiving, commemorating the American victory at the Battle of Saratoga after the surrender of 5,000 British troops.
- On Dec. 14, 1799, the first U.S. president, George Washington, dies at his Mount Vernon estate in Virginia. Two days earlier, he'd ridden out into freezing sleet and later refused to change out of his wet clothes. The next day he developed a severe respiratory infection.
- On Dec. 16, 1811, near New Madrid, Missouri, an estimated 8.6 magnitude earthquake slams the region, raising and lowering parts of the Mississippi Valley by as much as 15 feet. The quake temporarily reversed the direction of the Mississippi River, giving rise to Reelfoot Lake in Tennessee.
- On Dec. 17, 1903, near Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, Orville and Wilbur Wright make the first successful flight in history of a self-propelled, heavier-than-air aircraft. It stayed aloft for 12 seconds and covered 120 feet.
- On Dec. 12, 1989, Leona Helmsley, nicknamed the "Queen of Mean" by the press, receives a four-year prison sentence, 750 hours of community service and a $7.1 million tax-fraud fine in New York. Helmsley had once quipped that "only the little people pay taxes."
- On Dec. 15, 1998, after nearly 14 hours of debate, the House of Representatives approves two articles of impeachment against President Bill Clinton. The charges of lying under oath and obstructing justice stemmed from testimony about his affair with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky. The Senate later acquitted him of both charges.

STRANGE BUT TRUE

- It was noted American playwright and essayist Arthur Miller who gave the following sage advice: "Don't be seduced into thinking that that which does not make a profit is without value."
- In the early 20th century, celebrated racehorse Man o' War won 20 of his 21 career races. Interestingly, his one loss (often attributed to a terrible start and the extra weight he was carrying) was to a horse named Upset.
- Statistically speaking, you probably live within 320 miles of the place you were born.
- Have you ever experienced a social situation in which you have to introduce someone, but you can't quite remember their name? In Scotland, there's a word to describe the hesitation caused by that moment of panic: a tartle.
- According to a poll conducted by outdoor recreation retailer Gander Mountain, almost half of all hunters have some kind of ritual they observe to increase their chances for a lucky hunt. Some hunters go the entire season without shaving, some start each hunt at a particular time, some kiss the first bullet, some do an "anti-rain" dance the variations are endless.
- Getting married soon, but working with a tight budget? If you're considering cutbacks, you might not want to put the honeymoon on the chopping block. Researchers have found that couples who go on a honeymoon tend to have longer-lasting marriages than those who skip the trip no matter how much or how little you spend.
