Energy Seminar Points To Future Profitability

by Wendy McMullen

usinesses could recoup the cost of installing solar within four to six years, and energy from the sun could cut ongoing energy costs by over 60 percent, attendees heard at the May 9 seminar on powering green energy.

The case in point was Bailey's General Store, where the cost of installing solar panels on the roof was recouped within five years. Sanibel & Captiva Islands Chamber of Commerce CEO John Lai reported that store owner Richard Johnson installed 480 solar panels in 2015 and these panels not only paid for themselves within five years but cut ongoing energy costs by two-thirds.

Lai was one of a series of speakers at Powering Our Green Energy Future - A Community Conversation, held at The Community House and sponsored jointly by the chamber and Sanibel-Captiva

Conservation Foundation (SCCF).

'Ten years ago, it was almost never that you heard the words 'climate change' come out of someone from the chamber's mouth," Lai said. "Looking back at that, you just knew that the business community was going to have to, at some point, wake up and smell the coffee. Because recently, what we've seen is a very dramatic shift where clean energy and climate are now everyday conversations in the business and policy world.

'Ćlimate change is now recognized as a threat to our economy and way of life by most Americans, including some of the most conservative businesses in the country," Lai continued. "We are the Sunshine State, after all, and have the second most solar jobs and attracted billions of dollars in solar investment.'

Florida is projected to have the third highest development of solar energy over the next five years, which will create even more jobs and significant state taxes, and attract billions more capital investment, according to Lai.

The reason for the increased interest in solar was explained by Dr. Carrie Schuman, coastal resilience manager at SCCF. She called for treating both the symptoms and the causes. The symptoms are hurricanes and sea level rise. Hurricanes are caused by warm, moist air in the atmosphere, and the increase in hurricanes is caused by greenhouse gases that pollute the atmosphere because we're producing too much of them.

"Greenhouse gases are a natural part of our environment," she told attendees. "They're in our atmosphere. What they really do is they have an insulating effect for us. They trap heat that would normally

Captiva District Deals With More Than Fighting Fires

by Kathy Kurtz Ferrari

aptiva has many unique attractions. Its pristine beaches, breathtaking sunsets and iconic village destinations draw flocks of tourists to the island year-round.

But the Captiva Island Fire Control District, while obviously an essential part of the community, draws more curious visitors than most would imagine.

Because of the station's prominent location in the village with its bay doors often open, firefighters are not only prepared for emergencies, they frequently have to be ambassadors for the island.

The district is currently staffed with 13 firefighters who work in shifts of four on a crew. While not the busiest firefighting station in the district, it is one of the most intimately involved in its community.

"I think this is a great assignment," said Fire Chief Jeff Pawul during a recent afternoon at the station. "I love working out here. I love the small town feel of it. We're kind of our own little city out here. You get to know your residents, your homeowners. And you have a lot of families vacation out here, so any day you can see a little kid come up here and want to see the truck and turn the lights on. That's fun.

Pawul, 41, has been on Captiva for 15 years. He was named the department's fourth chief in 2018. The rest of the crew members have been stationed on the island from around a year and a half to 17 years. About half of them are military veterans.

"We're not the highest paid district in the county by any means, but some of the guys sacrifice that for not just being a number in a huge department," Pawul added. "It really all depends on your personal view of it, which is why we have a lot of the guys we have here. A lot of them are from smaller areas and understand that small hometown type thing and enjoy that. We're all one big family out here.

The district is funded through Lee County. It works with an elected board of commissioners, which includes residents Jeffrey Brown, Sherrill Sims and former Chief John Bates, meeting monthly to discuss budgetary and administrative

With the high cost of living on the islands, all firefighters drive from the mainland to come to work. Crews work on a schedule of 48 hours on, 96 hours off, to compensate for that distance.

For the most part, Pawul said crew members like the schedule but it can be difficult for families.

"That definitely takes a toll on employees, but that's kind of the sacrifice that the guys make," said Pawul, a father of young children himself. "Your family is part of this job as much as you are, because they are the ones at home waiting for you. But it's what we signed up for."
The fire department works closely with deputies from the sheriff's department to handle any emergency which arises. Of course they put out fires, but according to the chief, approximately 60 to 70 percent of the calls are medical, ranging from

Shoreline Project At Woodring Road Has Begun

The City of Sanibel began construction of a "living shoreline" at Woodring Road on May 16. For many years, the shoreline in this area has been prone to erosion during storm and high wind events. The installation of the living shoreline will help reduce the impact of erosion to Woodring Road, while also providing habitat benefits for fish and wildlife. Living shorelines incorporate the use of structural and organic materials, such as wetland plants, oysters and sand, with limited use of rock and concrete materials. The project is being funded by a grant from the Florida Department of Environmental Protection Resilience Implementation Program.

The project duration is scheduled for 90 days, weather permitting.

The Bock Peace Park parking area, located at the north end of Dixie Beach Boulevard, will be closed for the duration of the project for staging of materials and equipment.

Intermittent lane closures are expected, and drivers and pedestrians should proceed slowly and cautiously through the area when workers are present.

Contact the public works department at 472-6397 if you have any questions regarding this project.

Sponsors Sought For Islands Night

lslands Night, Bailey's General Store has turned over management and promotion of the annual event at Hammond Stadium in Fort Myers to the Sanibel & Captiva Islands Chamber of Commerce. This year's event is scheduled for Wednesday, June 1, when the Fort Myers Mighty Mussels meet the Tampa Tarpons for an evening of baseball, a pre-game parade featuring businesses and organizations from Sanibel and Captiva islands, and islander camaraderie.

"We are super honored to make the Sam Bailey's Islands Night a chamber event, especially since it's the first of the full islands' tradition – parade and all – to be held in three years," said John Lai, chamber president and chief executive officer. "It should be an exciting game against the Tarpons, a baseball club that has the distinction of being managed by

by Wendy McMullen

The third stage in the City of Sanibel's strategic planning process, which asked residents to give ideas on measurable goals for Sanibel, was well attended with most seats taken at The Community House on May 11.

This step of the strategic planning process was designed to inform Sanibel residents on results of the city's two-day strategic planning retreats held in March, to ask for public comment and to invite individuals to list their ideas on display boards stationed around meeting hall.

Attendees viewed a PowerPoint of the conclusions reached by the 42 participants at the strategic planning retreats, which included 12 city staff and five city council members. Together, retreat members conducted an analysis identifying the city's Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities and Threats (SWOT).

Strengths listed included the Sanibel

Plan that governs development, the council/manager form of government, the talented city staff and community support systems including nonprofit organizations.

Weaknesses were identified as poor technology within the city, staffing challenges and an overloaded infrastructure as a result of too many tourists.

Retreat participants, however, saw opportunities in improving city staff compensation, the use of technology, utilizing federal funding from the American Rescue Plan to replace lost revenues from COVID, adopting renewable energy in the city, improving water quality and providing transportation alternatives on the island.

Threats to Sanibel came from the erosion of home rule powers as a result of state mandates, new residents with less focus on environmental issues, sea level rise and water quality.

CARES was the acronym that summarized the city's core values, as expressed at the strategic planning retreats. These were:

Conservation: Preserve the environment and small town community;

Adaptive: Respond to changes in circumstances and the environment;

Respectful: Value diverse experiences and different points of view;

Ethical: Support honesty and transparency in all democratic processes;

Stewardship: Ensure fiscal responsibility and accountability and natural resources.

While the city and the retreat participants remain committed to the vision statement provided in the Sanibel Plan, the vision statement concocted at the workshop, the city said, could serve as a more concise version of the Sanibel Plan Vision Statement. This was:

Sanibel is and shall remain a barrier island sanctuary; one where a diverse, multi-generational community lives in harmony with the island's wildlife, preserving natural habitats for the inspiration of future generations.

The strategic goals outlined in the workshop formed the basis of the tables stationed around the room. These were:

1. Environmental Stewardship – Lead in environmental stewardship to restore, preserve and enhance our island sanctuary; advocate on issues to positively impact local water quality; and support land conservation, waste minimization, renewable energy and provide recurring education on the Sanibel Plan.

quintet of artists are showing their work at Sanibel Public Library during May and June. They are: Jane Hudson, Nancy Sperte, Bob Marshall, Renée Chastant and Jaye Boswell. All are members of the Sanibel Captiva Art League.

Hudson, an award-winning artist, paints in acrylic on canvas and paper. She also creates in collage. She is the coordinator for the Painting With Friends program at The Community House.

Sperte, president of the art league, uses primarily transparent watercolor both in her studio and plein air to create her paintings. She won second place at the Sanibel Captiva Art League exhibit at BIG ARTS in January.

Marshall likes the complexity of Zen

Tangle and its form of expression. He expresses with pen and ink and vibrant colors. He paints from scenes and iconic places on Sanibel.

Chastant, a watercolor artist, said, "Color animates my spirit and color is what excites me most in all of my varied painting subjects." Her art involves organic subjects such as plants, animals and rocks.

Boswell believes there is a strong connection between nature and art, which is evident in her eight acrylic paintings on view. She recently won the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation Brush of Excellence award.

Sanibel Public Library is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Monday and Thursday evenings until 8 p.m., located at 770 Dunlop Road.

Food Programs Ongoing To Meet Greater Demand

roviding nutritious foods is key to childhood growth and development, but this can be challenging for families facing food insecurity in Lee County. With increased grocery costs and summer vacation drawing near, childhood hunger becomes a greater risk for area households. Many families rely heavily on school provided meals and need to find other ways to afford additional food products through August 10, when classes resume for the new school year.

According to Feeding America, the nation's largest hunger-relief organization, people who are food insecure lack access to enough food and may make trade-offs with other expenses to buy healthy food. In Lee County children, the rate of food insecurity is 20.5 percent, or about 38,800 children

Fighting childhood hunger is one of the main focuses of FISH of SanCap food programs. The FISH Backpack Program provides nutritious, supplemental food and snacks for children year-round, including extra during school breaks. Through the backpack program, children receive nutritious, easy to prepare and great tasting foods on a weekly basis. All backpacks contain protein, fruits and vegetables, snacks, breakfast cereal, soup and/or a pasta meal, milk, juice and an occasional sweet treat. FISH also includes organic and vegetarian choices.

Last year, FISH began a supplemental "fresh meal" add-on to the program that provides a well-balanced meal kit that families can prepare together. This program is meant to encourage families to spend time together and relieve some stress knowing that at least one meal a week is planned during their busy lives. Each weekly fresh meal includes a childfriendly recipe and all the ingredients. To add a little variety, meal themes are often incorporated, such as Asian Cuisine. Not only are children spending quality time with family members, but they are also learning important life skills problem solving, planning, organization and cooking – that help them develop and grow. Studies have shown that good nutrition, particularly in the early years of life, is important for establishing a good foundation for a child's future physical and mental health, as well as academic achievement.

In 2021. FISH distributed 4.294 food backpacks to children, an increase of 118 percent over 2020. The backpack program is available year-round to children in pre-kindergarten through 12th grade whose family is either living on or has parents working on the islands. Due to the increase in participating families and need for food, FISH has doubled the amount of food provided weekly. "Our participation numbers continue to rise as inflation skyrockets," said Maria Espinoza, executive director for FISH. To accommodate the increase in participation within limited space at its walk-in center, FISH has added refrigeration for the fresh meals, and stores product and assembled backpacks in its ancillary space on Palm Ridge Road.

While the program has grown in participation and cost, FISH extends its gratitude to those who provide funding for the backpack and fresh meals programs. "We are thankful to the Kiwanis Club of Sanibel-Captiva, AngelFISH Society, Community Foundation, other grantors and private donors who provide us with partial funding for this program which allows us to continue to provide additional selections in the backpacks as well as the ingredients and recipe cards for a fresh, healthy and kid-friendly meal," said Espinoza.

Parents pick up food bags between 10 a.m. and 3:45 p.m. Monday through Friday at the FISH Walk-In Center, located at 2430-B Periwinkle Way on Sanibel. For more information, call 472-4775 or visit www.fishofsancap.org.☆

Wildlife Care Summer Camp

linic for the Rehabilitation of Wildlife (CROW) summer camp registration is open. CROW will host sixth to eighth graders for three Wednesdays in July covering three different species categories.

As Lee County's only licensed wildlife hospital, CROW's mission of saving wildlife is accomplished, in part, through educating the next generation of wildlife professionals about its work helping sick, injured and orphaned wildlife. The CROW Wildlife Care Summer Camp combines critical thinking skills learned in a classroom with real world applications in the STEM field. Participants can expect to spend a day on CROW's campus with the medical staff, students and volunteers. They will learn about Southwest Florida's wildlife and watch demonstrations on medical procedures used to repair and treat various injuries and illnesses.

Following the demonstrations, participants will replicate similar procedures on specimens during a dissection lab. All animals used in the dissection portion of the camp have been procured from suppliers subjected to inspections and compliance orders from the U.S. Department of Agriculture under the Animal Welfare

There will be three different species tracks available on three Wednesdays over the course of three weeks in July. The first session on birds will take place on Wednesday, July 13. The second session on mammals will take place on Wednesday, July 20 and the final session on reptiles will take place on Wednesday, July 27. The camp curriculum meets Florida's Next Generation Science Standards for content and dissection. All participants will be provided and required to wear standard personal protection equipment (PPE) throughout the day. Due to the educational content in this camp, participants must be in sixth to eighth grade for the upcoming academic term.

Contact CROW Education and Outreach Director Rachel Taylor by email at rtaylor@crowclinic.org for more information about costs and availability. For more information about the camp, visit www.crowclinic.org.☆

Native spurred butterfly pea Plant Smart

Banners, Wings And Keels

by Gerri Reaves

Tf you run across a flower structure similar to the ones shown here, you'll have narrowed the identification to the pea family. That's at least a start, but bear in mind that there are 19,000 known species in the family, many of which occur in Florida.

Pea is one of the most numerous of flowering plant families, after the orchid and aster, and contains three subfamilies.

The best known is the classic pea-flower look. Overall, that structure is bilaterally symmetrical, meaning that splitting it in half vertically results in two mirror images.

Another term for that type of flower structure is zygomorphic, having one plane of symmetry.

However, even this classic structure is replete with variety, as these photos

Native hairy cowpea illustrate.

Pea flowers have five petals that vary in size and shape and sometimes color.

The banner, or standard, is a large lobed petal at the top of the flower.

The wings are a pair of petals below the banner.

The keel is the fusion of the wings that creates a longitudinal ridge named for the resemblance to a boat's keel. It encloses the male and female parts.

This structure's similarity to a butterfly endows pea flowers with the name papilionaceous, derived from the Latin word for butterfly.

Another challenge to identifying members of the pea family is the existence of two other subfamilies.

One has variable flowers that are usually zygomorphic or at least asymmetric, however, they lack the banner, wings and keel. Native partridge pea (Chamaecrista fasciculata) is one example.

The other group has actinomorphic flowers that are usually round, or globose, and can be split into more than two identical parts. Native sunshine mimosa (Mimosa strigillosa), a popular groundcover, for example, has that

Options And More Options

by Capt. Matt Mitchell

uring the month of May, many fisherman are so focused on tarpon that when you mix it up and go after snook, redfish and trout, there has been little to no boat pressure. For a few trips last week, I got to switch it up and was extremely happy with the results. With our water temperatures hanging in the lower 80s, its been hard to go wrong.

Trout fishing remains as good as we have seen in years. Shallow flats in the two to four foot range that have that magical salt and pepper looking appearance have been loaded up. One area I spent some time at was the Buck Key flats. Although this is a huge area, during clean clear water conditions you can easily locate this grass and sand bottom that trout just gravitate to. Although I've been doing most of my trout fishing on free-lined live shiners, both soft plastics and twitch baits will get it done too.

Snook are on that annual move to the passes and beaches as they spawn this time of year. I'm still catching these fish anywhere from the mouths of mangrove creeks all the way out to snags on the beach. No matter where you choose to fish for them, a moving current is the most important factor. Pass fishing has heated up along with oyster bar fishing during high water periods also a good choice. Of all the species we catch, our snook fishing has produced the best numbers and action.

Redfish fishing in the middle to southern sound has been a little bit hit or miss, while anglers in the northern sound have been doing really well. When I have had clients who specifically want redfish, I've make the run to Demere Key north to Bookelia. Oyster bars in the south end of Matlacha Pass have been holding some quality redfish along with creek mouths feeding "Ding" Darling. We ran into redfish laid out from shallow mangrove islands several times this week while targeting areas for

The variety our fishery offers anglers is second to none. Along with the above species I mentioned this week, we also caught flounder, snapper and jacks. When conditions just don't make tarpon fishing a viable choice, I can't think of a better place to go bend a rod on a crazy amount of other species. June is always the start of more predictable light wind pattern and by far a better month to tarpon fish than unpredictable May.

Capt. Matt Mitchell has been fishing local waters since he moved to Sanibel in 1980. He now lives in St. James City and works as a back country fishing guide. If you have comments or questions, email captmattmitchell@aol.com.☆

CROW Case Of The Week:

Yellow-Billed Cuckoo

by Bob Petcher

he yellowbilled cuckoo (Coccyzus americanus) is a slender bird with a long tail and a long, yellowish bill. Its color features above are brown, while it has a white neck, chest and belly. You may also distinguish it by large white spots on the underside of its tail.

Yellow-billed cuckoos try to stay hidden, but their guttural calls are distinctive and can give their locations away if not too careful.

Čuckoos are known to forage for caterpillars and are one of the few bird species to dine on the hairy insects that are in the larval stage of a moth or butterfly.

At ĆROW, an adult yellow-billed cuckoo was admitted from Cape Coral after being found unable to fly. During examination, the bird was severely dehydrated and emaciated with depressed mental activity, general weakness, eye swelling and feather loss on the head.

'Although we don't know for sure what happened, we can assume the injuries were caused by blunt force trauma

Patient #22-2319 had a laundry list of ailments upon admittance but is improving while being closely monitored photo by Haillie Mesics such as being hit by a vehicle or flying into a window," said Dr. Robin Bast, CROW staff veterinarian.

X-rays revealed a right clavicle fracture and some lung bruising.

"Luckily for this bird, this type of fracture doesn't require surgery. If the wing can be held in a normal position, it can heal just with strict cage rest," said Dr. Bast. "If the bird has a significant wing droop or is very active, we can place a body wrap, which keeps the wing on the affected side resting against the body, preventing movement in the shoulder girdle and allowing the clavicle fracture to heal."

An update on the patient's other injuries was also provided.

"This patient is quiet but alert... some improvement from intake where it had a dull 'stunned' mentation," said Dr. Bast. "The swelling around the eye has decreased with anti-inflammatory medication. Feathers on the top of the head will take a while to grow back, but due to their location aren't required to be fully grown back in prior to release like wing or tail feathers would.

The patient's bruised lungs appear to be improving.

"Pulmonary contusions are a common sequela to blunt force trauma, and it is slow bleeding into the lungs as a result of the impact. Like any contusion or bruise, they tend to get worse over the first couple days before they start to resolve," Dr. Bast said. "We support these patients with supplemental oxygen and pain medication, and monitor to ensure no secondary infections develop.

The patient was given medications and will continue to be closely monitored under supportive care.

"It is cage-resting while its fracture heals, and it is receiving pain medications to keep it comfortable. It is also receiving nutritional support through tube-feedings as needed to supplement calories as this bird isn't eating well on its own yet," said Dr. Bast. "In a small bird like this and with a relatively simple fracture, the bone itself should be callused around two and a half to three weeks. At that point, the bird will be moved to a small outdoor enclosure to do its own physical therapy and recondition its flight muscles.

"If there are no complications, we expect this bird to be released within the next four to five weeks."

Remodel Under Way At SCCF Nature Center

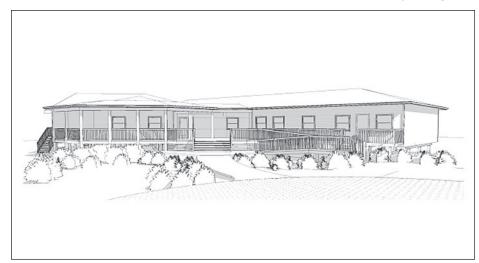

ast week, contractors started extensive renovations to transform the former Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation (SCCF) Nature Center into an energy-efficient collaborative space intended for more interaction among staff members and volunteers, and with visiting scientists.

The design by Sanibel architect Amy Nowacki features more than 20 offices and workstations, an indoor lab space, bathrooms with a shower for those commuting by bike or coming in from the field, outdoor decks and solar panels. The remodel is being done by Benchmark General Contractors and is expected to be completed in November. It will also include a reception area with space for volunteers and a large board room with seating for 42 people for presentations.

Originally constructed in 1977, the aging structure was no longer meeting the needs of the organization, which currently employs a staff of 36 at five different locations across Sanibel

"These upgrades and more efficient use of our space will allow us to consolidate campuses and to integrate coastal wildlife and habitat management staff with our administrative, facilities and communications staff," said CEO James Evans, who is committed to leadership

It was 45 years ago last week that SCCF first moved into the original nature center at 3333 Sanibel-Captiva Road after a nine-month stint in one of the quarters at the Sanibel Lighthouse. Prior to that, the nonprofit founded in 1967 had mostly operated out of a 325-square-foot space on Periwinkle Way.

In an article in the Island Reporter, SCCF put out a call for "volunteers, especially those with pick-up trucks" to help with the May 14, 1977 move.

At that time, the neighboring JN "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge hadn't yet established a visitor center. When its doors opened in December 1977, the nature center was noted for its "modern construction and contemporary design." It was partly intended to shift SCCF's primary focus since its founding in 1967 from land acquisition to education, with plans to open a native plant nursery on the grounds also in the

The bank participated as a Women Build Bronze Hammer Sponsor again as well.

We value the supportive partnership we have developed with Habitat for Humanity, and the bankers on our staff cherish the time we spend together on the Women Build program," said Robbie Roepstorff, bank president. Local Youth To Receive Eagle Scout Award

by Allison Havill Todd

ince its inception in 1911, only four percent of the members in the Boy Scouts of America (BSA) program have earned the highest attainable rank of Eagle Scout, which must be achieved before reaching the age of 18. This prestigious honor is awarded only to the most deserving youths after years of hard work, service and dedication followed by a lengthy review process. Sanibel resident Liam Horvath, currently a senior at Canterbury School in Fort Myers, first joined BSA when he was in the seventh grade and has successfully met all the requirements and earned the 21 merit badges needed to submit his final project to the board of BSA for review and acceptance.

In addition to portraying ideals based on the Scout Oath and Law and demonstrating an attitude of service and leadership, a candidate for Eagle Scout must complete a community service project which the Scout plans, organizes and manages. The Scout then presents his project for final approval before being presented with a medal and a badge recognizing his extensive accomplishments.

Having attended The Sanibel School

since the sixth grade, Horvath is dedicating a project to honor the time he spent there. He approached the school principal, Jamie Reed, to share his idea of creating a large labyrinth on an underutilized space on the school property that could be enjoyed by attending students as well as the general community. A labyrinth is a maze typically created from stone that, when walked, offers a means to relieve stress and clear one's mind.

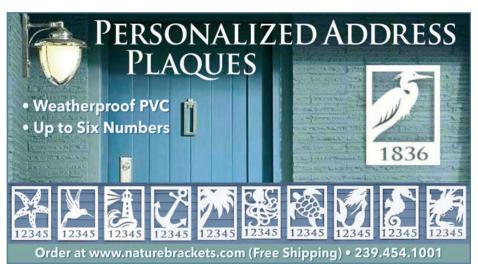

Horvath set to work creating the maze using a combination of pavers, shells and colored rocks, which were donated by island businesses Soon Come Inc. and RS Walsh Landscaping. The finished project measures 22 feet in diameter and can be found on The Sanibel School property on a grassy parcel of land between the basketball courts and the parking lot. When asked why he chose to build the labyrinth as his Eagle Scout project, Horvath shared, "It's a way of giving back to the school for the experience I gained while being a student there." He intends for the labyrinth to serve as a memorial to those affected by the coronavirus disease, and he has ordered a special plague dedicated to affected families on the island to be placed at the entrance of the maze. He wants his completed project to be something that is easy to maintain, long lasting and of benefit to others.

Horvath presents his project to the board of the Boy Scouts of America on May 26, and I am certain, after speaking with this inspiring young man, that we can expect to see him proudly bearing the distinguished medal and badge identifying him as an Eagle Scout! Allison Havill Todd lives on Sanibel Island with her husband and two rescue dogs. She is an avid dog lover, business coach and active outdoor enthusiast. Summer Reading Kickoff Party At Sanibel Library he Sanibel Public Library Summer Reading Program kickoff party will be held on Saturday, May 28 from 10 a.m. to noon. Families are invited to stop by for games, snacks and raffles, plus the popular Guess How Many (candies in a jar). During the party, families can sign their children up for the summer reading program; open to ages baby to teen.

Youth Services Librarian Deanna Evans said, "I am super excited about the Oceans of Possibilities theme this year, as it relates so well to Sanibel." If you can't attend the kickoff party, you can register for the program online with Beanstack at www.sanlib.org/children starting May 28.

Over the past decade, children have taken part in Reading for Others during the program. Participants earned books for their personal collection, and for patients at Golisano Children's Hospital of Southwest Florida. Since its inception in 2012, readers have helped contribute more than 12,000 books to the hospital. New books are needed every year because books are given to young patients to take home. This summer, as in year's past, readers will earn books. Teens can also earn volunteer time when they read a book and write a book review, thus gaining service hours.

In-person programs for elementaryage programs are planned for Tuesday afternoons, with storytimes for younger children on Wednesday mornings. Family-friendly feature films will be shown on Friday afternoons. Some presenters include Sanibel Sea School Mobile Unit, Bailey-Matthews National Shell Museum, a mammal program with live bats, Master Storyteller Windell Campell, Clinic for the Rehabilitation of Wildlife and reptiles from Adam's Teens and 'tweens (grades six to 12) programs will be held on Thursday evenings and include an escape room, craft programs, VR and competitive cupcake decorating. The "CSI Sanibel" program in July invites teens to solve a fictional crime with the help of a reallife forensic analyst. The full schedule is available online at www.sanlib.org.

For readers who are traveling this summer, eShelf offers a great selection of ebooks and audiobooks (in several languages) for readers of all ages.

The Reading for Others program runs from May 28 through August 6.

The Sanibel Public Library Foundation, along with the Joan Hunt Cory Children's Fund, underwrites the annual summer reading program. The fund was established in 2008 to honor longtime library volunteer and supporter Joan Hunt Cory.

Margaret Mohundro, library executive director, said, "The summer reading program has grown to become more popular every year. We are especially appreciative to the library foundation and the Joan Hunt Cory Children's Fund. I think the program highlights the generous spirit of the islands.

Sichuan Peppercorn

by Chef John Wolff

ichuan pepper, also known as Chinese prickly ash and Chinese pepper, is a spice commonly used in the Sichuan cuisine of China's southwestern Sichuan Province. When eaten, it produces a tingling, numbing effect due to the presence of certain flavonoids in the peppercorn. The spice has the effect of transforming other flavors tasted together during or shortly after eating the spice. It is commonly used in Sichuan dishes such as Chongqing hot pot, and is often added together with chili peppers to create a flavor known as málà or "numb-spiciness."

The peppercorn may be used whole or finely ground, as it is in five-spice powder. Ma la sauce is a combination of Sichuan pepper and chili pepper, and it is a key ingredient in many Sichuan dishes. Sichuan pepper is also occasionally used in pastries, and even beer. Beijing microbrewery, Great Leap Brewing, uses Sichuan peppercorns, offset by honey, as a flavoring component in some of its beers.

Despite its name, Sichuan pepper is not closely related to either black pepper or chili pepper. It is actually the seed pod of the Chinese prickly ash and is more closely related to the citrus family. Related species are used in the cuisines of several other countries across Asia. Due to its relation to the citrus family, it was actually banned from importation into the United States from 1968 through 2005. It was feared that canker could be transmitted to domestic citrus plants and devastate citrus production in states such as California, Arizona and, of course, Florida. The import of Sichuan peppercorn has since slowly resumed after a standardization of certain drying techniques and duration time of drying at certain temperatures could be established.

As I mentioned, the Sichuan pepper is not related to black pepper, white pepper or chili pepper. While whole, green, freshly picked Sichuan pepper may sometimes be used in cooking, it is the dried seed pod that is more commonly used. Once dried, the black seeds inside the husk are discarded, along with any stems. The flower-like husk is actually what we know as Sichuan pepper or peppercorn.

Sichuan pepper is also available as an oil, sold as either Sichuan pepper oil, Bunge prickly ash oil or Huajiao oil. Sichuan pepper infused oil can be used in dressings, dipping sauces, or any dish in which the flavor of the peppercorn is desired without the texture of the peppercorns themselves. Sichuan pepper is also mixed with salt, toasted and browned in a wok, and served as a condiment to accompany chicken, duck and pork dishes. The leaves of the Sichuan pepper tree are also used in soups and fried foods. Here is one of my favorite recipes using Sichuan peppercorn. Although it is a common item on most Chinese restaurant menus, most do not actually use real Sichuan peppercorn. I'm talking about Dry-Fried Sichuan Beef. You can adjust the amount of ground peppercorn to your taste or tongue-numbing preferences.

Dry-Fried Sichuan Beef

Ingredients

3 tbsp. cooking oil

12 oz. flank steak

5 slivers of fresh ginger (fine julienne)

1 tbsp. spicy bean sauce

2 stalks celery (julienne)

1 medium carrot (julienne)

1 tbsp. shaoxing wine (rice wine, not rice wine vinegar)

3/4 tsp. sugar

1 tbsp. light soy sauce

1 tsp. sesame oil

1 tsp. ground Sichuan peppercorn

1/8 tsp. chili pepper flakes

2 scallions (julienne)

Directions

Heat the wok over high heat until it starts to smoke. Add 1 tbsp. oil and coat the wok before adding the beef. Immediately spread the beef in a single layer. (This step will prevent the beef from sticking to your wok.) Brown the beef until the liquid cooks off and the meat is well-seared, about 2-3 minutes.

Remove the beef from the wok and set aside

Turn the heat down to low and add 2 tbsp. of oil to the wok. Crisp the ginger and add the spicy bean sauce. Cook for about a minute until the oil turns red, adjusting the heat as needed to avoid burning. Next, add the celery, carrot and cooked beef. Turn the heat up to high and stir. Immediately add the shaoxing wine, sugar, light soy sauce, sesame oil, ground Sichuan peppercorn, chili flakes (optional) and scallions.

Stir quickly for about a minute and mix everything well. Transfer to a dish and serve with plenty of rice.

New Seafood Market Opens On Sanibel

by Allison Havill Todd

requent visitors to the Sanibel and Captiva Farmers Markets are no longer limited to Sunday or Tuesday to shop for their fresh, local seafood. While the familiar turquoise fish truck will continue its presence at the markets during season, the much anticipated arrival of the Island Seafood Market store on Sanibel has finally come to fruition. With its doors opening on April 25, this boutique shop is sure to please the most discerning lovers of fresh seafood.

Business and life partners, Katie Fischer and Casey Streeter first opened their Matlacha based fishing venture nine years ago and are proud to be first generation fishermen. This small, family owned fishery began with just one commercial fishing boat and has since grown to a fleet of four with an additional six independently owned and operated boats providing customers with fresh, local, wild caught seafood.

Streeter emphasized that 85 percent of their seafood is sourced locally and domestically, with the exception of a few seasonal items coming from other locations. They use only responsible, sustainable practices to provide their customers with fresh cut fish every day, coming directly from ship to store.

Co-owner Casey Streeter

Some of the more popular items at the new market include grouper, snapper, stone crab claws, shrimp and local oysters (during season). Customers can also purchase an assortment of smoked fish, handmade dips, Key lime pie and other accoutrements. And, though I am not generally a fan of tartar sauce, their freshly made recipe is a must try!

The couple intentionally planned the opening of the Sanibel store to take place after the peak tourist season, giving them the opportunity to get to know the locals and establish a good base by providing exceptional customer service. Streeter shared, "We want to be as much a part of the Sanibel-Captiva community as we are in Matlacha." Their focus is on keeping things simple and doing what they do best. With a strong emphasis on personalized service, those who frequent the tastefully designed shop will experience hands-on attention, individual recommendations and suggested methods of cooking and preparation for an array of seafood selections. Streeter and Fischer believe in offering free samples of different items in the store daily explaining that, "We love to expose people to different fish and introduce them to something new and incredible that they might not otherwise know about."

Fans can keep up to date on the latest and greatest offerings as well as the fresh catch of the day on the company's facebook page: Island Seafood Market Sanibel. Located in Palm Ridge Place at 2330 Palm Ridge Road, next to Sanibel Deli & Coffee Factory, the market is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. with a friendly smiling face to greet you. Planning a Memorial Day gathering? This is your local stop for fresh and delicious seafood for the grill along with a Key lime pie freshly made on Pine Island!

Variety authors and favorite books. When asked what my favorite book is, I reply Pillars of the Earth. I won't let it leave my house. Naturally I have read every book by Ken Follett. His latest Never is about the unimaginable, imminent threat of World War Three. It's certainly been on our minds of late with what's going on in the world. Former U.S. Treasury Secretary Lawrence H. Summers, calls it "A compelling story, and only too realistic."

Never is expertly researched and set against a global stage. It takes you on a high-stakes journey from the heat of the Sahara Desert to the political arenas of North America, East Asia and beyond, and sees a world edging closer to an unprecedented global crisis. The novel is more than a thriller, it's an action-packed, globe-spanning drama set in the present day,

Two intelligence agents in the Sahara Desert are risking their lives on the trail of a powerful group of drug-smuggling terrorists. A young woman is fighting against human traffickers while traveling to Europe with the help of a man who may not be who he says he is.

A senior government official, who has huge ambitions for himself and his country, fights against the older members of the government who may be pushing China and North Korea to a place of no return.

In the United States, the country's first woman president, Pauline Green, is dealing with terrorist attacks, illegal arms trading and smear campaigns of her political opponent. Avoiding war is something she will fight with all her power, but when one act of aggression leads to another, will China and the U.S.

be drawn into all-out war neither wants?

Never is an extraordinary thriller brimming with cautionary wisdom for our times.

School Smart

by Shelley M. Greggs, NCSP

Shelley,
I want my kids to spend more time outdoors enjoying nature and getting some fresh air. They do play some sports and like to swim but otherwise prefer to be inside. They are in second and fourth grade. I need some ideas to make them want to go outside.

Joy S, Fort Myers

Jov

Children today spend less time outdoors than any other generation, devoting only four to seven minutes to unstructured outdoor play per day while spending an average of seven and a half hours in front of electronic media.

Simultaneously, childhood conditions such as obesity, anxiety and more have been rapidly increasing. There are some studies that suggest the rise in these unhealthy conditions may be related to more time with electronic media and less time playing.

Other studies show that spending time outside is associated with better mental health, improved mood, heightened immunity and higher quality sleep. And, of course, most of the time that we're outside, we're doing something physically active, so that too is an advantage.

Below are some outdoor activities that you can easily share with your kids. With these mostly free activities, you will be setting the time constraints and any rules you might need to will help you and your children relax, have fun, get a little exercise and enjoy being outdoors together.

Go for a walk when you all get home from your day at school and work. An afternoon or early evening walk is the perfect way to connect with your child and help them to unwind after a long day in the classroom while taking in your natural surroundings.

Create a natural scavenger hunt. Look for pretty leaves, fossils, wildflowers and other outdoor items and allow your children to display them at home for a day or so.

Introduce your kids to some of your favorite childhood games like hopscotch, four square, red rover, red light green light and kickball. They will love learning about the games you played as a child, and they too will have fun playing them.

Take a trip to the farmer's market. This could be a weekly activity that both parent and child can benefit from. It's a great opportunity to begin teaching them about nutrition and meal planning. It may also get them more interested in different types of food to eat by letting them pick something new to try each trip.

Have an afterschool or dinner picnic. Set up a blanket in your yard or at a park. Experience eating outdoors and while eating, encourage them to interact with their surroundings by identifying and discussing what they see.

Start a small garden. Gardening helps to teach kids responsibility. Give the kids specific responsibilities and watch their observational skills increase. And they'll also get to experience the satisfaction and gratitude that comes with nurturing plants.

tudents who have borrowed federal education loans and are finishing their schooling must take exit counseling, according to Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA).

The federal government requires the counseling so student loan borrowers can understand their obligations and options. They can learn how to make their payments on time and whether they can qualify for a deferment or forbearance, which allows them to stop making payments temporarily, if they qualify. Most federal student loan payments are in forbearance at least through August 31 because of the pandemic.

Interact Club Helps Prepare Resource Packets

he Sanibel Interact Club, sponsored by the Sanibel-Captiva Rotary Club, assembled 400 FISH of SanCap Hurricane Preparedness Resource Packets. The club challenges middle school students to identify places of need within the community and find ways to help. The mission of the club is to develop young leaders who make connections in the community and highlight their role in making positive change.

Barb Ellis, liaison between the Interact Club and Sanibel-Captiva Rotary Club, suggested the community project as a way for students to fill an important community need. The resource packets contain information on evacuation routes, flood zones, hotels with generators, shelters and pet accommodations.

'We are so thankful to the Interact Club for helping us with this project,' said Erika Broyles, senior services director for FISH. Severe medical cases are air transported by helicopter to mainland facilities. Last year, there were around 10 to 12 incidents that required airlift.

For roughly the past 40 years, the air ambulance landing area had been located at the Rauschenberg estate. But due to construction on the property, that access was no longer available. A new area was found on open property on Osprey Way Drive along the Gold Coast.

'As long as that property stays open and isn't developed, and there's not many vacant lots out here to begin with, so it's only a matter of time before somebody develops that lot," Pawul commented.

While always a concern from the remote destination, regular ground ambulance transportation for non-life threating incidents has become more difficult as the islands have become more congested. According to the chief, quidelines for airlift require anything greater than 30 minutes by ground ambulance.

"Well, every transport from out here is greater than 30 minutes," he noted.

Captiva does not have its own ambulance, relying on Sanibel's one provider, so conversations recently began with Lee County for Captiva Fire District to have its own ambulance. Pawul said the district budgeted to include it.

"And we are already trained. We're already certified. We have all the same equipment that those guys do," he explained, noting the logic of saving the county money.

"That was not an acceptable solution for (the county), so the only other one was the county fund an ambulance and put another one out on the islands," he said. "So that's kind of where we're at now, trying to negotiate that we get an ambulance here.

Pawul also said he was not opposed to and staffing levels." The issue is one of the district's top concerns.

Part Two of this story in next week's Island Sun will include how changes on Captiva have affected the fire department, firefighter training and other areas of operation.

Elysium

I, if such a thought need be conceived, have transcended the

That once bore my soul in the place of life and substance, of light And darkness, to this otherness where time happens as if all at once

And all places need not be isolated or parsed away from those Of its kin, so that the presence that was once me is now the unity Of all that there is, all that there was and all that there ever will be.

I have come home, as come the soaring birds from the far north Gliding upon the crystal currents of the clear airy ocean And over the mountain tops snow capped, verdant sloped, Piercing the sky, perches for the flights of angels beckoning The pulsing life onward, a river of life onward into the hazy distance

Where all must come to breathe the last, to fill the lungs their last sweetness.

The I that once was, espied the streams of life flowing high above As we walked the among the green fields and through the golden groves

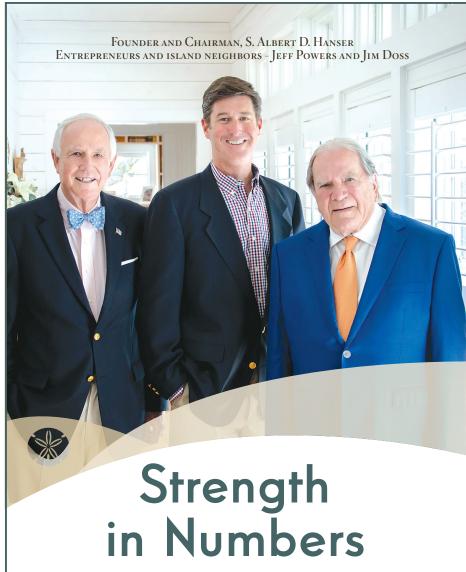

Resounding with the songs of lives lived in quiet tranquility, those made

Inchoate, vaporous by way of silence and shame and yet they all come

And pause and marvel at this largest of things, this place of boundlessness

This place of sparkling sun and silver twilight where the work we have done is done

County Issues Causeway Work Advisory

he City of Sanibel received the following road work notifications from Lee County: Sanibel Causeway Ísland "B" Shoreline Stabilization Project: Lee County's contractor, Spectrum Contracting, Inc., is providing services to stabilize the shoreline on Island B. The project consists of clearing exotic vegetation along the shoreline, excavating some existing stone, which will be reused, placement of new beach sand and construction of T-groins. Expect large vehicles entering and exiting the roadway. Drivers and pedestrians should use caution in this area. The project is expected to be completed before summer.

Sanibel Causeway Bridge Structure: Lee County began making repairs to the Sanibel Causeway bridge structure span C, over San Carlos Bay, on April 18. Work will continue from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. through November 24. All work will be performed over the bridge on a snooper truck. There will be several lane shifts with no lane closures.

be redirected away from the Earth, and that's something that we want, right? But the issue is that we're essentially contributing too much too fast.

Pointing to the way in which Sanibel was a pioneer in conserving beaches and natural areas resulting in a high quality of life, increased property values and a strong business community, Schuman suggested that similar threats and impacts should lead the community to work on renewable energy.

"We have a real opportunity to be a case study for our region," she said, introducing the work of the Sanibel-Captiva Renewable Energy Working Group, formed last year with the aim of presenting viable solutions to reduce greenhouse gas pollution, reducing direct energy costs and increasing regional resiliency along with promoting investment in electricity grid, electric transportation infrastructure and energy efficiency. The ultimate goal of the group is to reduce the long-term impacts and costs of the accelerating effects of climate change.

The renewable energy group on Sanibel and Captiva is working alongside the Southwest Border Regional Resiliency Compact.

Schuman explained that one of the chief culprits is from energy generation, with 38 percent of emissions coming from heating and cooling, and that renewable energy, such as solar, results in less emissions.

Dr. Simeone Komisar, environmental engineering program director at Florida Gulf Coast University, added to the list of negative effects of climate change, pointing to increased insurance and electricity costs, and suggested common sense measures to preserve electricity.

"There's an enormous economic opportunity in lost energy," Komisar said. "Thirty percent of the energy lost is in the buildings. We don't have good ductwork, we don't have enough insulation in our buildings. We have windows that are single pane. We have old, faulty wiring. We have poorly designed entrance ways. We lose a lot of energy when we open the door. We have poor landscaping that doesn't shade the building.

He added that what we have in abundance in Florida is solar and that those who have put in solar hot water understand the rapid return on that

"Solar votable photovoltaics are really the future," Komisar said.

Lee Country Electric Cooperative (LCEC) was also in attendance with an information table on energy audits and net metering. Homeowners producing more energy than they need through solar panels can bank it and sell it back to LCEC, a spokesman for the cooperative told the Island Sun.

Zonta Supporting Awareness Campaian

submitted by Kathleen Skubikowski

eriod Poverty Awareness Week is May 23 to 29. What is period poverty? Studies have shown that nearly two-thirds of low-income women struggle to afford menstrual products, the cost of which can lead to difficult choices between health and other basic needs. Women facing period poverty may use, and reuse, other household items to manage their periods, or ration pads or tampons to make them last longer. This can contribute to poor physical health outcomes such as infections and irritation.

Also, lack of access to period products combined with anti-period stigma contribute to negative physical, mental and social outcomes for lowincome women and girls. Students skip school and women skip work during monthly periods because they cannot afford reliable, appropriate products for use at home, at school or at the workplace. In Florida, for example, one in four low-income teens has missed class due to a lack of access to these supplies, yet menstrual products are not covered by public SNAP, WIC or Medicaid benefits, nor are they available cost-free in middle school or high school bathrooms while toilet paper, soap and paper towels are.

The national organization Alliance for Period Supplies created Period Poverty Awareness Week to draw attention to the issue of period poverty and its negative impact on families in Florida and throughout the country. The Zonta Club of Sanibel-Captiva joins other area and national nonprofits - Renewing Dignity (Jacksonville), Cycle Forward (Fort Myers) and the National Diaper Bank Network – in setting aside May 23 to 29 to begin conversations about period poverty, host a product drive and collect donations locally.

In her book Periods Gone Public, Jennifer Weiss-Wolf says of period poverty: "The result is, effectively, a denial of (an) equal chance to obtain an education, to acquire the tools to escape poverty, contribute to the economy and participate fully and productively in civic life. When half of the population is held back, all of society suffers."

During Period Poverty Awareness

Week, Sanibel-Captiva Zontians will man information tables outside Bailey's General Store on Monday, May 25 (morning) and May 23 and 27 (afternoons) and collect donations for Cycle Forward of Fort Myers to distribute. According to Zonta President-elect Erika Steiner, "Along with Zonta International, we envision a world in which women's rights are recognized as human rights and every woman is able to achieve her full potential. Period poverty is a huge barrier to achieving this vision for so many women and girls."

Bailey's General Store is located at the corner of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road on Sanibel. For more information or to make a donation, visit

The Wonder Of Mother Nature

by Marcia Feeney

ne of today's hottest design trends is a return to nature. From fabrics to wall coverings to accessories, our living spaces can easily reflect an embrace of Mother Nature. Why the growing interest in bringing a little bit of the outdoors inside?

First, we long for peace and quiet at home. As our lives outside our homes become more harried and stressful. we all have returned to our homes as retreats, and decorating them with furnishings and accessories we find soothing and comfortable.

Secondly, our increased awareness of the environment and the quest to preserve its beauty has led to a desire to bring bits of it home. Here's a look at several areas of interior design that can get you back to nature!

Bouquets of colorful botanicals with flower, leaf and vine prints are perennial favorites. Imagine relaxing in a lush garden where flowers flourish all around you - soft violets, delicate lilies of the valley, bold hydrangeas and stately red tulips. Fun, faux animal prints remain popular - even zebra stripes and leopard spots will lend an air of exotic sophistication to any room.

You can go from gorgeous garden shades to the rich fruit tones of deep raspberries, soft banana yellows, plums and strawberries. Even nature's neutrals are also playing their important role with inspiring shades of wheat brown, amber waves of grain, the creamy whites of magnolia blossoms and terra cotta corals all highlighted by an amazing azure blue sky. All these colors are uplifted by nature's green, the color that will dominate our interior decorating in this decade, from deep, leafy green to teal, to greens with a yellow tint.

Today's worn weathered wood styles, featuring more of a matte finish with lighter wood tones, are even appearing on contemporary furnishings. Sofas and chairs are being covered in natural cotton looks and sport trims of raffia and hemp. Wicker and rattan furniture mixed with warm wood tones lend themselves to more of a casual style of decorating.

Natural organic fabrics, florals and botanicals are blooming in their popularity. Don't worry about too much pattern; these blooming designs look great when mixed with solids, stripes, checks or even plaids. By coordinating your "blooming" window treatments with furniture, bedding, even your linens, you'll find yourself surrounded by Mother Nature's beauty. Our love of Earth and the resurgence to preserve it, influences us to bring nature's colors into our homes and our everyday lives. And what better way to start soothing the soul than right in your own home.

Relax... Enjoy... You deserve it. Marcia Feeney is an interior designer on Sanibel/Captiva Islands. She can be reached at marcia@ coindecden.com.☆

Rotary Happenings

Then a hurricane strikes, who do you turn to for help? When red tide all but closes the tourist industry on the island and hours are cut to nearly none, where do you go for help to pay the bills that don't stop just because tourism does? When COVID-19 literally closes down your job, where do you go for assistance? On Sanibel and Captiva, we are fortunate enough to have a well-known secret for assisting residents and essential workers of our community. It's called FISH of SanCap. Maria Espinoza, executive director of FISH, spoke to our group last week.

FISH has been assisting those in need in our community for over 40 years. Some of the many services they provide are a food pantry, Meals-by-FISH, a program that ensures that all islanders have access to at least one hot meal a day, the backpack program, which ensures that our students have food and snacks over the weekends and school breaks, and holiday food baskets to make sure our island neighbors can enjoy an Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner without creating additional monetary stress at a financially strained time.

FISH also offers educational opportunities for adults and children, outreach programs to ensure that loneliness and isolation don't take hold, workshops on healthy eating, mental wellness, Medicare consultations and other wellness issues. The organization provides daily reassurance calls and visitations as well as emergency financial assistance for essential costs such as rent, utilities and medical bills. And 93 percent of donations go directly back to the community. This is truly a neighbors helping neighbors organization.

The Sanibel-Captiva Rotary Club is holding meetings on Zoom and in person at The Community House, 2173 Periwinkle Way. Doors open at 6:45 a.m. and the meeting begins at 7:15 a.m. Email william.harkey@ gmail.com by the Tuesday before the meeting if you would like to attend in person. All are welcome. For more information, visit www.sanibelrotary.

Changes Made To Alligator Hunt

Norida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) Commissioners approved increasing hunting hours for the statewide alligator hunt and adding precharged pneumatic airbows to the legal methods of taking an alligator.

Increasing hunting hours from the current 17 hours a day to 24 hours a day on most areas will provide those with an alligator trapping license/ alligator harvest permit seven more hours a day of hunting opportunity and more flexibility when scheduling hunting

Adding precharged pneumatic airbows to the legal methods of take can assist hunters with mobility challenges and youth or smaller framed hunters who might have limited dexterity or strength. To be considered a legal take method, the airbow's arrow needs to be attached to a restraining line, which allows the hunter to safely gain control of the animal.

These new rules will take effect in time for the 2022 statewide alligator harvest season. Visit www.myfwc.com/ alligator for more information.

This year, sustainable hunting opportunities will be offered at 128 AMUs (65 countywide AMUs and 63 specific AMUs). The FWC will be issuing over 7,300 alligator harvest permits through three random drawings and a final leftover phase.

The dates to apply for alligator harvest permits this year from 10 a.m. to 11:59 p.m. are as follows:

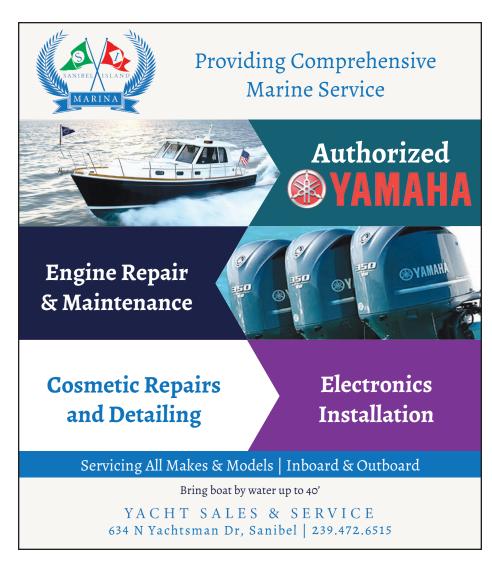

Phase İ Applications – May 6 to 16; Phase II Applications - May 20 to

Phase III Applications – June 3 to Phase IV Leftovers - June 16 to October 14 (or until permits are filled).

Anyone who will be age 18 or older by August 15 and has a valid credit card may apply for alligator harvest permits at www.gooutdoorsflorida.com or in person at a license agent or tax collector's office. Learn more about the alligator harvest permit application process by visiting www.myfwc.com and clicking on "Limited Entry/Quota Hunts" under the "Buy and Apply" drop down menu and then clicking on 'Statewide Alligator Hunt Permits.

The FWC offers several tools to help you with the application process. Find application worksheets, a harvest unit map and listing, and application tips by visiting www.myfwc.com/alligator and clicking on "Statewide Alligator Harvest

The Perils Of Joint Accounts

by Craig R. Hersch, Florida Bar Board Certified Wills, Trusts & Estates Attorney; CPA

hear this question all too often. A client will come in, thinking they have a great solution, and propose, "Should I put my bank and brokerage accounts in joint name with one or all of my children?" In almost all cases, the answer is an emphatic "No!"

First and foremost, when you title an account in joint name with someone else, you are actually making a gift of half of its value. So, if Ethel puts her brokerage account worth $1 million into joint name with her daughter, Francoise, she just made a gift of $500,000 to Francoise (half of the value of the account). Because the most anyone can gift tax free is only $16,000, titling an account worth more than $32,000 would require the filing of a federal gift tax return. In my example, Ethel would have to file a return that would either reduce her gift and estate tax exemption or if she's already used up her exemption, she may actually have to pay gift tax.

Second, if Ethel's daughter Francoise is experiencing any legal or financial problems, Ethel may have put her account at risk. If Francoise is going through a divorce, for example, a forensic accountant may discover the asset and it might be in jeopardy depending upon circumstances. The same holds true if Francoise has creditor or bankruptcy problems.

Third, titling the account jointly will likely thwart Ethel's estate plan. Assume that Ethel has a will that says that upon Ethel's death, all of her assets are to be divided equally between her three children. If the account is titled jointly with rights of survivorship with Francoise, Francoise would inherit the account outright despite Ethel's contrary intention in her will. Even if the account is held jointly as tenants in common, Françoise owns half of it and the other half would be distributed in thirds according to Ethel's will.

Francoise might be altruistic and wish to share the account equally with her siblings. But she might have a gift tax problem herself. If she tries to divide the account that she legally owns, she is making a gift in excess of the $16,000 annual gifts that she can give tax-free.

Fourth, accounts owned jointly do not enjoy the full "step-up" in tax cost basis that would otherwise occur. Assume that Ethel owns 1000 shares of ABC Company stock that is worth $100 a share but she paid $10 a share many years ago. If Ethel sold all of her shares, she would recognize a $90,000 capital gain. But if Ethel dies still owning the shares, her children inherit them at the date of death value for tax cost basis purposes. So if her beneficiaries sold the shares shortly after her death for the $100,000, there would not be any capital gain and therefore no capital gain tax to pay.

But if Ethel places the account in joint name with Francoise during Ethel's lifetime, on Ethel's death, Francoise only gets a one-half tax cost step-up. In this case, Francoise would recognize a $45,000 capital gain if she sold the shares for $100,000 ($100.000 sales price less $5,000 basis in half the shares and $50,000 basis in the other half of the

Hopefully, you are convinced that placing assets in joint name with children isn't a good idea. So what should you do if you want your child to be able to transact business on your accounts - particularly if you become disabled and unable to manage your own affairs?

This is where revocable living trusts really shine. Ethel can create a revocable living trust and name herself as her initial trustee but also name Francoise as her successor trustee in the event of a disability. Françoise can then transact business on all of Ethel's accounts that the trust owns. It is not a gift to Francoise since she is acting as a fiduciary for her mother. On Ethel's death, the trust avoids probate and rightfully distributes the accounts to all of Ethel's children (if that is her wish).

Another alternative is a durable power of attorney. Ethel can sign a durable power of attorney that would name Francoise as her attorney-in-fact to transact business on all of Ethel's accounts. You should know that the Florida law governing durable powers of attorney changed significantly back in 2011. If you have a durable power of attorney created before that date, you should consult with your estate-planning attorney to determine if yours needs updating.

The bottom line is that you shouldn't put accounts and assets in joint name with your adult children. There are reasonable alternatives that don't carry all of the disadvantages associated with joint accounts.

How's The Market? Ask Ann

It Takes A Strong Team!

In past columns, I have commented on the benefit to both Buyers and Sellers when both the Buying Agents and the Selling Agents stay on top of the sale by dealing quickly with any unexpected issues that may arise during the sale process. Over the last few weeks, we had four separate sales, two of which I was the Listing Agent and two in which we represented the Buyers. All four closed on time and most importantly, the Buyers and the Sellers were pleased with the sales process. Thank you to Lori Schulz of SanCap Gateway Realty, Jeff and Tiffany Burns of Sotheby's, Becky Sterling of Sotheby's, Phaidra McDermott and Laurie Lauther of Kingfisher Real Estate, and Laura Johnstone of Keller Williams in Fort Myers. The professionalism on their "side" of the sale really helped things go smoothly. A big thank you to all of them!

Here is my tip when selecting an agent to represent you: Do your best to ascertain their ability to work effectively and cooperatively with other agents. It really pays off.

Our market remains a Seller's Market with just 14 homes (3 under $1,000,000) and 17 condos for sale on Sanibel.

Thank you for reading my column and I hope it benefits you.

Latest Homeless Count Estimates In Lee Country

he Lee County Homeless Coalition, in partnership with Lee County Human and Veterans Services and many volunteers, recently conducted the annual Point in Time (PIT) census to count the homeless and provide data to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

The PIT count documented 560 homeless persons, of whom 47 (8.39 percent) were chronically homeless according to the HUD definition. HUD defines chronic homelessness as "an unaccompanied adult homeless individual with a disabling condition who has either continuously been homeless for a year or more or has had at least four episodes of homelessness in the past three years."

Among the 560 were 49 families with 86 children. There were 24 veterans recorded in the PIT count, 21 of which were active in a rapid rehousing program working with a case manager to obtain housing.

The total number of persons estimated to be experiencing homelessness on the single night of January 26 was an increase from 2020 and 2021, which had 444 and 394 respectively. The lower estimate in 2021 is reflective of a modified counting methodology due to the pandemic. In 2022, the PIT count was conducted as it had been prior to the pandemic. Volunteers and staff from homeless service providers conducted in-person interviews with those who were encountered across Lee County on January 26. In addition to the change in methodology, the current economic conditions in the county have contributed to the increased estimates in 2022.

The PIT count is also used to gather the information that allows local service providers to target services to meet the specific needs of the homeless in local communities. The count, which asked people where they slept the night of January 26, included both sheltered and unsheltered homeless individuals and families

Housing and service programs for the homeless are provided in part through Continuum of Care funds from HUD. The 2021 Continuum of Care funding announcements were made in March 2022. Lee County was awarded funding to sustain existing programs and begin new programs that provide housing

Frankly Speaking

by Howard Prager

he playoffs is a different level of play. The truly elite athletes rise to the occasion, and those that can't perform are often traded. Sports executives often say "this coach or player got us from A to B, and now we have to go all the way to the top." My Chicago Bulls aren't even at B yet, although they were banged up and missing their key defender, as well as playing last seasons' champs. But everyone's banged up. Let's look at the Milwaukee-Boston series, which Boston fought back from being down three games to two to win two in a row and the decisive seventh game. Phoenix and Dallas also went the full seven with Dallas clobbering Phoenix in Phoenix to move on. They'll play Golden State, now favored in the West while the Celtics take on the No. 1 seed Heat. But don't take my word on it. Pick a game - any game - and watch the whole thing and tell me what you think of the intensity, level of play and amazing comebacks.

Also close to home, the Florida Panthers moved on to the second round of the Stanley Cup playoffs for the first time in nearly 20 years. They beat Washington in overtime, thanks to Carter Verhaeghe.

Thus far, Verhaeghe has six goals and six assists in the playoffs, and is tied with Edmonton Oilers Captain Connor McDavid for most points in the playoffs. This is only the second time in franchise history that the Panthers qualified for the second round, after finishing No. 1 in the regular season. There are many OT games in the Stanley Cup. New York Rangers survived Pittsburgh. Tampa Bay took it to Toronto. The Maple Leafs have now had 10 consecutive failed opportunities to close out their opponent, despite having home-ice advantage and a deep roster. The Edmonton Oilers are off to the second round of the Stanley Cup for the first time since 2017 after beating the Los Angeles Kings 2-0 in Game 7. I could go on with close playoff games and seven-game series.

Speaking of going on, three fascinating baseball stories. Cincinnati Reds threw a combined no hitter, only to lose to the Pirates 1-0. How? 3 walks followed by a ground out. I thought that was a first, but according to ESPN, the Pirates become the sixth team in big league history since 1901 to win despite not getting any hits. It last happened in 2008, when Jered Weaver and Jose Arredondo of the Angels lost while holding the Dodgers hitless. For you sports trivia fans, that's a stat worth remembering.

Speed – bring on the heat. Do-Hyoung Park who covers the Twins for MLB reported that "Jhoan Duran is a threat to set a new Twins velocity record seemingly every time he touches the mound -- and he did that twice over a one-inning appearance last Saturday, extending his own record up to 103.3 mph on a fastball to Franmil Reyes in the ninth inning of Minnesota's 3-2 loss to the Guardians. That was the hardest pitch thrown in the majors this year, surpassing a 103.1 mph offering thrown by Cardinals right-hander Ryan Helsley on May 1 – and Duran's own 103.1 mph heater four pitches earlier." And, Shohei Ohtani hit his 100th HR last week. Again from MLB, "Ohtani, the reigning American League MVP, became the third Japanese player to reach 100 career homers in the majors, joining Hideki Matsui (175) and Ichiro Suzuki (117). It took Ohtani 444 career games to reach the mark, which is the fastest to 100 homers by a Japanese player. He is just the second player in Major League history with 100 homers as a hitter and 250 strikeouts as a pitcher, joining Hall of Famer Babe Ruth.

Finally, a good news story from the Chicago Tribune about a record-setting young woman. "Naperville's Lucy Westlake climbed into the record books at 5:36 a.m. last Thursday (Nepal time) as the youngest American female to summit the highest peak in the world, Mount Everest. The typical schedule for an Everest expedition takes 45 to 60 days, making Westlake's pace much faster than the norm."

"I came into the climb well-acclimated as I had spent the past five weeks training with some of the best distance runners in the world in the highlands of Kenya at 7,000 feet," Westlake, age 18, said in a news release. "I am a distance runner as well, so my fitness level helped to endure the long, difficult days on the mountain. I also have a lot of experience climbing so the challenges of Everest felt familiar.

'The teen planned to summit Tuesday, but high winds plagued the upper mountain Sunday, forcing Westlake and Sherpa Mingma Chhiring to descend from camp 3 at 23,500 feet above sea level to camp 2 at 21,000 feet before she made the final ascent on Thursday. Westlake, whose expedition took 26 days, finished her senior year of high school a semester early, giving her time to prepare for her record-setting Everest ascent. In 2016, at age 12, Westlake became the youngest girl to reach the highest point in the lower 48 states in America. She started climbing with her father at age 7. Last year, Westlake set the world record as the youngest female to climb all 50 U.S. state high points. By climbing to the top of Everest, Westlake is on her way to becoming the youngest woman to complete the Explorers Grand Slam: summiting the highest peak on every continent and skiing the last degree to the North and South poles. Westlake, who starts college in the fall at the University of Southern California, has used her climbs to promote her passion for bringing safe water to the world through the WaterStep project." What an amazing young woman and so glad she's doing it for a great

t the next business luncheon meeting, members of the Sanibel & Captiva Islands Chamber of Commerce will hear an update on water quality policy and projects from Eric Eikenberg, CEO of The Everglades Foundation, and Chauncey Goss, board chair of South Florida Water Management District. Postponed from February due to emergency legislative demands in Tallahassee, the meeting will take place on Wednesday, June 8 at 11:30 a.m. at Marriott Sanibel Harbour Resort, hosted by Bailey's General Store and Captains For Clean Water.

Eikenberg, a political strategist and environmental policy expert, leads one of the country's most prestigious and respected environmental nonprofits, with an annual operating budget of more than $10 million.

As CEO, Eikenberg oversees a team of nationally recognized scientists, educators, lobbyists, and communications and development professionals who work together to achieve a decadeslong campaign to restore America's Everglades – roughly three million acres of endangered habitat that is vital to Florida's economic and environmental has extensive policy and political experience in Tallahassee and Washington, DC. He previously served as chief of staff to former Gov. Charlie Crist and former U.S. Rep. E. Clay Shaw, Jr. The latter authored the landmark $8.4 billion Comprehensive Everglades Restoration Plan (CERP).

A sought-after public speaker on the importance of preserving one of America's most unique natural habitats, Eikenberg is a regular op-ed columnist. He also is a widely quoted source for national and local media outlets, including National Public Radio, CNN, Associated Press, U.S. News & World Report, Politico and Miami Herald.

In 2020, Influence magazine named Eikenberg one of Florida's Most Influential People in Florida Politics for his advocacy work. In 2020 and 2019, Florida Trend named him one of Florida's 500 most influential business leaders. Furthermore, he was selected to the 2019 panel of 50 Influential Floridians as part of an initiative led by a group of Florida newspapers to address pressing statewide issues like the environment, climate change, healthcare and transportation.

Eikenberg currently serves as chairman of the Zoo Miami Foundation board of directors. Following the 2018 election cycle, he served on Gov. Ron DeSantis' Environment, Natural Resources and Agriculture Transition Team, where he participated in a process that led to the governor outlining a bold, comprehensive environmental agenda.

Eikenberg has been a longtime champion for expediting Everglades restoration, with a knack for innovation and engaging partners in the corporate, philanthropic and political arenas. During his tenure as CEO, The Everglades Foundation has provided scientific, technical and policy support to numerous decision-makers in executing CERP. Eikenberg's team helped bring widespread attention to the perennial toxic algae crisis in Florida and across the globe, and has been a leading voice on the need to incentivize technological solutions to problems that threaten waterways, livelihood and health.

Being Resilient

by Julie Rosenberg, MD

ne of the most important characteristics for wellbeing is resilience. Resilience means being able to successfully adapt to difficult or challenging life experiences. Resilient individuals have developed the ability to:

Bounce back from adversities;
Perform effectively under pressure;
Confidently face challenges;
Recover from setbacks;
Cope with emotional upheaval;
Manage overall health and wellbeing.
While the journey to developing resilience is unique for each person, the following tips can be used by anyone to help build inner strength and more effectively adapt to adversity.

1. Enhance self-awareness – Self-awareness involves being aware of different aspects of the self; traits, thoughts, behaviors and feelings. Being self-aware allows you to pause, reflect, and consider before choosing, deciding and acting. Self-awareness is a foundational resilience skill.

time each day for reflection. Consider

2. Learn from experience – Make these questions: How have I coped with hardships in the past? What skills and strategies have I used to get myself through difficult times? The lessons learned from past experiences may provide a boost of confidence when dealing with present challenges.

3. Focus your attention – When you focus your attention on the present moment, you are less likely to experience stress and unhappiness from brooding about the past or worrying about the future. Practicing mindfulness is key to focusing attention, as you learn to focus on being aware of what you're sensing and feeling in the moment, without interpretation or judgment.

4. Know your limits – Building resilience is like strengthening a muscle in the body. It requires patience and consistency. Knowing your limits will allow you to step back from stressors and give you time to take care of your needs while working on adaptive skills and strategies.

5. Learn to let go – Letting go is both a physical and a mental practice. Letting go involves releasing bodily tension, as well as reducing restlessness and physiological arousal. Letting go also involves creating mental space by separating yourself from your own thinking and the continuous narratives that play in your head. A mindfulness practice supports letting go.

6. Be hopeful – Although you cannot change the past, you can always look toward a better future. Hopeful people believe they have both the "will" and the "ways" to achieve the outcomes they want – and therefore they tend to take positive action in pursuit of their goals.

7. Make each day meaningful – Do something each day that gives you a sense of meaning and accomplishment. Finding meaning within each day will support you in leading a happier and more meaningful life. The defining feature of a meaningful life is feeling connected to something bigger than oneself (spirit, family, God, nature, etc.) and knowing that your life matters.

Dr. Ken Ginsburg, professor of pediatrics at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, described seven integral and interrelated components that make up being resilient. While initially described for building resilience in children and teens, the "7 C's" of resilience are broadly applicable:

Control: Taking responsibility for one's decisions and actions. A sense of personal control helps one to maintain emotional stability and negotiate their way through life

Competence: The learned ability to handle difficult situations effectively. Competence requires developing the skills to address life's challenges.

to address life's challenges.
Confidence: The belief in one's own abilities. Confidence is rooted in competence.

Contribution: Making choices and taking actions that improve the world.

Coping: Developing adaptive skills and strategies to manage oneself during stressful or difficult times.

Connection: Having a sense of security and belonging through close ties to friends, family and community groups.

Character: Living and leading with a strong moral compass and well-defined value system. Individuals with good character typically have a strong sense of self-worth and confidence.

In conclusion, resilience is a strength that allows people to adapt and even thrive following adverse experiences. While developing the skills to become resilient takes work and intentionality, there is a potential payoff. Resilience has a positive effect on life satisfaction and is an important source of wellbeing.

Hacks To Make The Month Better

by Suzy Cohen, RPh

ear Readers: Menstruating can be a tough time... exhausting, really. A woman's uterus sheds its lining at fairly regular monthly intervals and that can be quite a tiring process to endure, as many of us can attest to. At the time of birth, there are approximately one million eggs, but by child-bearing age, only about 350 eggs will be ovulated month after month. After menopause, there are no more eggs.

Each of us experiences this in our own way and it can be more unpleasant for some than others, especially if estrogen dominance is occurring. If the menstrual cramping (termed dysmenorrhea) is severe, visit your gynecologist for professional advice. In the meantime, here are five proven premenstrual syndrome (PMS) hacks for your consideration:

1. Warmth – Obvious as it may seem, using a hot pack can be incredibly soothing during a menstrual cycle. The warmth that radiates into the abdominal muscles instantly eases superficial pain associated with PMS. You might be surprised by how effective it can be to take just 10 minutes, lay down and let the warmth of a heating pad, or microwavable hot pack, penetrate into your achy muscles.

2. Chocolate – Dark chocolate contains magnesium which is proven to naturally relax and calm the smooth muscles of the uterus. Eating chocolate also releases endorphins, specifically dopamine, which in turn reduces the symptoms associated with monthly cramping. It's a comfort food too, and the reason is because it improves production of serotonin and dopamine.

3. Exercise – Endorphins during exercise are released from the hypothalamus in your brain. The opiate receptors in the brain interact with the released endorphins and, through this process, we then perceive pain in a different, lesser way. Exercise reduces stress and anxiety. It doesn't have to be full-on heart-stopping aerobics, just move.

4. Chastetree Berry (Vitex agnuscastus) – Chasteberry is also called Monk's Pepper, and it comes from the Mediterranean. Dietary supplements are available in the U.S. and have long been prized to help with female complaints, both for PMS and post-menopausal issues. It stimulates progesterone and therefore, helps balance high estrogen.

5. Raspberry Leaf Tea – You may not expect much from a tea made of fruit, but you'd be wrong. This little hack is among the fastest (and best) ones I had ever tried. Just a cup should take down severe cramp pain to a dull roar. The extracts and phytochemical in this fruit help because they are anti-spasmodic and anti-inflammatory in nature. Just a note of caution: raspberries contain some natural salicylates and you should know this in case you are allergic to aspirin. LCDAS is in need of volunteers to provide foster homes for kittens or for a nursing mother plus her litter. All new fosters are provided with all supplies needed.

LCDAS is also in need of adopters for those cats and kittens old enough to go to their forever families. Now through Monday, May 30, all adoption fees on cats and kittens will be waived with an approved application.

The shelter is in need of: baby blankets, water bowls, kitten nursing bottles, flat dishes, digital thermometers, cat beds, Dawn dish soap, cat nail trimmers and Royal Canin baby cat food. Items may be dropped off at 5600 Banner Drive in Fort Myers, during regular business hours.

Q: I am graduating from high school this year and going into college in the fall. I would like to take the summer off, but my parents think I should work. What do you suggest?

A: Congratulations on becoming a graduate and going onto college. This is an accomplishment of which you can be proud. With regard to a summer job, would you be interested in coming to a middle ground and doing something part-time? It's always nice to make the extra income, and you could save up for college. You didn't say if you are planning to work part-time while attending college. It would be nice for you to have some free time before you attend college, yet it's nice to have money saved for college as you will be going out with other students and wanting to purchase goods.

Have you worked out a plan for when you go to college with your parents or will you be on your own with providing for yourself? This may help you in making a decision regarding this summer. The job market should be plentiful and, if you can find something fun, you can't go wrong as you will have money either to save or extra spending money.

Whatever you decide, enjoy your summer and all the best in your first year

Strength Training Lowers Risk Of Premature Death

by Ross Hauser, MD and Marion Hauser, MS, RD

ost of us know that exercise is good for our health and wellness. Yet, physical inactivity or sedentary lifestyles are becoming an even larger public health problem. Exercise comes in many forms, including aerobic or cardiovascular exercises that increase your heart and breathing rates, thus strengthening your lungs and heart; stretching and yoga type movements that help improve your ability to move, improve balance and even help prevent falls, which can be especially concerning as we age; and strength training, also known as resistance or weight training.

The benefits of strength training are enormous. Many studies have shown that if you do any kind of exercise, you will improve longevity and prevent diseases, but strength training is especially important as we age. Most studies have been performed on aerobic type exercise and its longevity benefits; however, we recently came across an article in the British Medical Journal entitled, "Muscle-strengthening activities are associated with lower risk and mortality in major non-communicable diseases: a systematic review and meta-analysis of cohort studies.'

This study is a meta-analysis of cohort studies, meaning many studies were reviewed and analyzed, and the results were put together into one analysis. The results show that muscle-strengthening activities were inversely associated with the risk of developing cardiovascular disease (CVD), diabetes, lung cancer, total cancer, and what they term "all-cause mortality" independent of aerobic activities among adults greater than 18 years of age without any severe health

J-curve is a trendline that shows an initial loss immediately followed by dramatic gain. This type of association was found between muscle-strengthening activities and all-cause mortality, CVD and total cancer. People achieved risk reduction of about 10 to 20 percent when they were able to perform 30 to 60 minutes per week of musclestrengthening exercise. The researchers also observed a substantial risk reduction for diabetes at 60 minutes per week of muscle-strengthening exercise, which then leveled off. Combined musclestrengthening and aerobic activities (vs none) were associated with a lower risk of all-cause, CVD and total cancer mortality.

Many musculoskeletal guidelines recommend that adults perform musclestrengthening exercises at least twice per week. Whether one should engage in more than 30 to 60 minutes twice weekly is unclear from this study. They go on to state that the combination of muscle-strengthening plus aerobic exercise could produce even greater benefits, but more studies need to be done.

The take-home point here is strength training provides great health benefits and reduces risk of premature death. The main benefits include muscle building and endurance which makes you stronger, lowering your risk of falls and improving mobility and flexibility. Stronger muscles also help you if you do get sick or injured - because you have built up strength and are better able to recover.

Muscle also burns more calories than fat, plus research shows that your metabolic rate is still increased up to 72 hours after strength training, thus you can burn calories more efficiently and lose weight if combined with the proper eating plan.

With strength training comes toning, thus you appear leaner and stronger, which in turn makes you feel better about yourself. We all know that exercise produces "happy hormones" or endorphins, therefore you feel great.

We can most definitely attest to the health benefits of strength training. We have a small gym on the lower level of our house, and work out with the personal trainers at Back in Motion Sports and Performance in Fort Myers, right near our Caring Medical office. We know you will not regret it. So dust off those dumbbells and start lifting them. Here's to your health!

This information is not intended to treat, cure or diagnose your condition. Ross Hauser, MD, and Marion Hauser, MS, RD, established Caring Medical in 1991. Caring Medical Florida and the Hauser Neck Center are located in Fort Myers. They can be reached at info@

by Kay Casperson

ime is an interesting topic since it affects us all differently depending on where we are in our life's journey. After spending many years on an island, the term

"On Island Time" comes up often, which is a different way of keeping time, like showing up whenever and being totally relaxed. There are also the many sayings surrounding time, such as "time is money," "the time is now," "time is precious," "time heals," "don't waste your time," or "the right time." But, the one that resonates with me right now is that "time flies."

My youngest daughter has just finished high school. To me, she was just a baby yesterday. I can still remember everything about her growing up and to think that she will be going away to college soon is surreal, to say the least. I remember people always saying that they grow up so fast and cherish every moment. Now I say the same thing to others; time flies in the blink of an eye.

Each year, we experience certain things that we can always count on. Things like seasons, holidays or birthdays. I know I can always count on the time of year when the ospreys come to our nest to have babies, or when the turtles start laying eggs on our beaches. So there are the predicted times and the unexpected times that make life exciting and challenging.

Ecclesiastes 3:1-8 in the Bible (NIV) sort of sums it all up.

There is a time for everything and a season for every activity under heaven: a time to be born and a time to die, a time to plant and a time to uproot, a time to kill and a time to heal, a time to tear down and a time to a time to weep and a time to laugh,

a time to mourn and a time to dance,

a time to scatter stones and a time to gather them.

a time to embrace and a time to a time to search and a time to give a time to keep and a time to throw away, a time to tear and a time to mend, a time to be silent and a time to speak. a time to love and a time to hate, a time for war and a time for peace.

We cannot conquer the time as it is beyond our control. Our lives will continue to have times of joy and sadness, pleasure and pain, harmony and conflict, and life and death. This is called the life cycle, and we need to trust it and know that there is always an ultimate

My affirmation for you this week is: "I will cherish every moment in time, knowing that each is unique and cannot be replaced."

Gemini (May 21 to June 20) A relationship progresses more slowly than you would prefer. Best advice: Insist on a frank and open discussion. What is learned could change minds and, maybe, hearts.

MOMENTS IN TIME

• On May 24, 1883, after 14 years and 27 deaths during construction, the Brooklyn Bridge in New York is opened, the largest suspension bridge ever built to that date.

- On May 27, 1894, Dashiell Hammett, author of The Maltese Falcon, is born in Maryland. He worked as a Pinkerton detective for eight years and turned his experiences into fiction. The novel was filmed three times, the last in 1941, starring Humphrey Bogart.
- On May 28, 1902, Owen Wister's The Virginian is published. It was the first serious Western and one of the most influential in the genre. The book became a sensation and inspired four movies and a Broadway play.
- On May 29, 1932, the so called Bonus Expeditionary Force, a group of 1,000 World War I veterans seeking cash payments for their veterans' bonus certificates, arrives in Washington, D.C. One month later, that number had swelled to nearly 20,000 strong.
- On May 26, 1940, President Franklin Roosevelt makes a radio appeal for the support of the Red Cross. Belgian and French civilians were "running from their homes to escape bombs and shells and machine gunning, without shelter, and almost wholly without food," FDR told Americans.
 - On May 23, 1960, a tsunami caused by an earthquake off the coast of Chile travels across the Pacific Ocean and kills 61 people in Hilo, Hawaii. The massive 9.5 magnitude quake had killed thousands in Chile the previous day. The Pacific Tsunami Warning System, established in 1948, worked properly and warnings were issued to Hawaiians six hours in advance, but some people ignored the warnings and others actually headed to the coast to view the wave.

• On May 25, 1977, the communist government of China lifts its decadeold ban on the writings of William Shakespeare. Mao Tse-Tung's 1966 revolution had banned any cultural work that did not have the required ideological content.

NOW HERE'S A TIP

- Planning a new roof? Choose a light color for cooling benefits. Also check with your home-insurance company to see what discounts it might offer for different styles or options, like upgraded hurricane clips or fireretardant materials. - REW in Tennessee
- Cut a cord of firewood in the spring, and cure it yourself. Store it away from the house and properly care for the wood by stacking it where it will have access to the sun and wind to dry it. Let it season for six months or longer, and you'll have firewood ready when the temperatures drop again.

- If you're melting chocolate in your microwave, do yourself a favor: Line the bowl with wax paper or parchment paper. The chocolate is still easy to stir, but when you take it out, you can scrape all the chocolate off the paper so that none is wasted! - AA in Florida
- Place a bit of clear tape over the spot where you are going to drive in a nail to prevent the nail from cracking drywall. It will go right in. Also, if you're nailing into wood, drag your nail through some soap (bar soap is fine) before striking it. This does the same thing – it will keep the wood from splitting. You can even keep a travel-size bar of soap in your nail apron for just this purpose. – PK in New Jersey
- Shopping for bagged frozen vegetables? Give them the squeeze test: If the vegetables feel hard and solid, they have thawed and refrozen.

• Keep musty smells out of your linen closet by stashing a box of baking soda on one of the shelves, just as you would in the kitchen.

STRANGE BUT TRUE

- Most of us know that pregnancy has its challenges, but one you might not be aware of is that expectant moms attract roughly twice as many mosquito bites. It's believed this is because they exhale more carbon dioxide and have higher body temperatures than those who aren't pregnant.
- A Chinese father hired virtual assassins to kill his son's World of Warcraft character, hoping that would stop the young man from playing after he'd quit his day job.
- American death row prisoners are given a physical to ensure they're fit enough to die.
- During the 1984 Olympic Summer Games in Los Angeles, McDonald's announced a promotion offering free food and drink every time an American athlete made it to the medals podium. After the former Soviet Union boycotted the games, it turned out to be quite a costly promotion.
- The French duo Daft Punk took their name from a negative review they received from Melody Maker magazine regarding a trio of which they'd previously been members.

- Between 1887 and 1950, American weather forecasters were not allowed to use the word "tornado."
- A particularly pessimistic fan of football's Cleveland Browns requested in his obituary that six members of the team serve as pallbearers at his funeral so "the Browns could let him down one last time.
- In the early 1970s, the first Nike shoe was inspired by... a waffle. After watching his wife make waffles, the company's co-founder, Bill Bowerman, poured urethane into a waffle iron to see what would happen. The Waffle Trainer debuted soon after.

Shore Fishina:

Don't Harm The Fish by Capt. Matt Mitchell

anding a big fish from the beach can be hard on the fish. Dragging a fish up onto the sand if you're going to release it is not an option as it usually damages or kills the fish.

Hold the fish in the water while you unhook it if you're going to release it.

The less you can touch a fish before release the better for the

If you want a picture with the fish, support it as you lift it out of the water – and do it quickly.

Before releasing, revive the fish while holding it in the water; moving it slowly back and forth so water goes over its gills. The fish will let you know when it's ready to swim off.

Florida residents as well as out of state visitors need a fishing license to fish from shore.
