FSW To Host World's Most Prolific Painter

Florida SouthWestern (FSW) State College will present Steve KEENE: 57 Miles or 455 Furlongs – a newly commissioned, site-specific installation at the Bob Rauschenberg Gallery by the “World’s Most Prolific Painter” from April 12 to June 9. A public opening and reception will be held on Thursday, April 12 from 6 to 8 p.m.

Dubbed the “Assembly-Line Picasso” by Time magazine (when his work was featured in 1997) and having created more than 300,000 paintings over the last 35 years, Keene is a Yale University-educated, Brooklyn-based artist who believes in mass-producing hand-painted artworks.

Like his exhibition The Miracle Half-Mile at the Santa Monica Museum of Art in 2000 (where Keene completed more than 10,000 pictures over the two-month run of the show), the internationally-acclaimed painter will be working on-site at the Bob Rauschenberg Gallery for two-weeks prior to his opening. Inspired by Rauschenberg’s self-contained retrospective The ¼ Mile or 2 Furlong Piece (which was world-premiered in three sections at the Bob Rauschenberg Gallery from 1983 to 1986), Keene estimates that his exhaustive output since the 1990s (if paintings were placed side-by-side) would extend more than 57 miles (or 455 furlongs) in length.

Famous among indie-rock fans for designing album covers for bands including Pavement and The Apples in Stereo, Keene has painted instruments, video and concert stage sets, as well as promotional and tour posters for the likes of Soul Coughing, Merzbow, The Klezmatics and the Dave Matthews Band. In addition to features on National Public Radio and in the pages of The Wall Street Journal, The New York Times, Los Angeles Times, LA Weekly, Filter and Spin magazines, the artist has had major solo exhibitions at Moore College of Art in Philadelphia, Rice University in Houston, the Museum Ludwig in Cologne, Germany, the Linden Centre for Contemporary Art in Melbourne, Australia and the Czech Centre in London. Yet, at a monumental and continuous 8 by 200 feet in length, the painter’s planned installation for Steve KEENE: 57 Miles or 455 Furlongs at the Bob Rauschenberg Gallery at FSW will be one of his most ambitious and immersive projects to date.

This exhibition is made possible by the generous support of the Stanton Storer Embrace the Arts Foundation and The Beaches of Fort Myers and Sanibel.

Bob Rauschenberg Gallery at FSW is located at 8099 College Parkway in Fort Myers. For more information, call 489-9313 or visit www.RauschenbergGallery.com.✪

Historic Downtown Fort Myers, Then And Now:

Hotel Transitions

by Gerri Reaves, PhD

In 1907, Frank Graham of Brooklyn, New York, bought land across from the Lee County Courthouse on Oak Street (today's Main Street).

The parcel stretched along the north side from Monroe to today's Broadway (created in the mid-1920s).

He had big plans – a 50-room hotel – but the property didn't take off, indeed, doesn't seem to have been developed, until after it changed hands several times and came into Alice Tonnelier's ownership in January 1913.

She was the wife of Peter Tonnelier, who, after arriving in Fort Myers in 1912, became one of the town's biggest property owners and developers.

The Tonneliers, and, to some extent, Tonnelier brothers Edward and Henry, were major players in the town's 19-teens boom.

Alice went on to become a significant property owner in her own right, both during her husband's life time and after she was widowed in 1932.

The hotel location was a promising one, for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad's passenger depot was a stone's throw away – just across Monroe on the northwest corner.

The railroad's arrival in Fort Myers in 1904 boosted tourism and the economy in general, particularly agriculture and the citrus industry, for goods could be shipped "up north."

In addition, the town needed good accommodations for the increasing flow of visitors.

In the early 20th century, only a handful of real hotels existed in Fort Myers – the Royal Palm, Bradford, River View and Hill House were the main ones – supplemented by boarding house hotels, such as the Florida House and Thorp House.

The Hammon was one of several hotels the Tonneliers owned over the years, including the Graystone, the Leon and Grand Central.

Late in 1914, the Hammon advertised a "single meal" for 35 cents and a 21-meal ticket for $7.

Within a year or so, it was renamed the Kenmore and greatly expanded and renovated.

A two-story addition was designed around a rotunda, and nine additional rooms were built.

From the second-floor balcony, guests could enjoy the view of the new county courthouse, completed in 1915.

The new rooms were booked prior to opening, suggesting a successful business. It was otherwise a convenient location, with a café on the corner at Monroe and various stores and businesses within a block and at the hotel's ground level.

Nevertheless, the hotel was gone by the mid-1940s. Decades ago, a Goodyear store occupied part of the parcel and then was vacant for a time.

In 2009, the seven-story Hotel Indigo opened.

Walk over to the site of an early 20th century hotel that lay just a hop, skip and a jump from the railroad depot.

Then visit the following two research centers to learn more about the many hotels that awaited visitors in Fort Myers through the decades.

Disability Didn't Keep This Sailor From The Sea

Allen Fiske aboard the 58-foot wheelchair-accessible catamaran Impossible Dream

Allen Fiske will speak about his journey as a disabled boat captain at the Mound House on Tuesday, March 27. The event, which is part of the Friends of the Mound House speaker series, begins at 5:30 p.m. with refreshments. The talk begins at 6 p.m. Admission is free.

Fiske grew up on the water. Born in central Massachusetts, he spent summers on Cape Cod and on Rhode Island beaches.

His fascination with sailing took hold early and continued through college and beyond. He owned three sailboats and became a regular sight as a captain on Long Island Sound.

Then, at age 36, he was involved in a car accident that left him with paraplegia. He believed his life as a sailor was over.

"Ironically, at about the same time, a sailor from Newport, Rhode Island, by the name of Harry Horgan became a paraplegic and started Shake-A-Leg," Fiske explained. Horgan developed an accessible sailboat called the Freedom Independence 20.

That would become the ticket to Fiske's independence as well. He sailed for a couple of years with Shake-A-Leg in Newport before moving to south Florida. In 1990, Shake-A-Leg opened a branch in Miami.

For 12 years, Fiske was outreach director for Shake-A-Leg. Then last year, he was invited to crew for a month-long sail from Boston to Quebec City aboard the Impossible Dream, a 58-foot wheelchair-accessible catamaran, the only boat like it in the United States.

"We had been invited to join 40 tall ships from around the world and take part in RDV2017, the 150th anniversary celebration of Canada," Fiske said.

Today, he still teaches sailing on Miami's Biscayne Bay. "We use 10 of the specially designed sailboats and 10 disabled assistant instructors to teach graduate students at the University of Miami who are getting a PhD in physical therapy how to sail," Fiske said.

The Mound House is located at 451 Connecticut Street on Fort Myers Beach. For more information, call 765-0865 or visit www.moundhouse.org.✪

Fort Myers Art:

Company To End Season With Guerilla Theater

by Tom Hall

Ghostbird Theatre Company will end its sixth season by producing Samuel Beckett's Catastrophe as a free piece of guerilla theater on Friday, May 4. The exact location and time, however, will not be disclosed until the last minute. So be alert lest you miss this extraordinary theatrical event.

The play involves a limited cast consisting of an actor (the protagonist), who stands motionless on a plinth, and a director, his female assistant and a lighting tech, who mold the abject thespian's stance, posture and costume to fit their own personal vision and predilections. Ghostbird describes Catastrophe as a comedy "about directing, or more accurately, a play about directorial hell."

One of Samuel Beckett's more overtly political works, the play can also be viewed as an allegory on the power of totalitarianism and the struggle to oppose it – with the protagonist

metaphorically representing oppressed people worldwide who are ruled by dictators and autocrats and used as mere pawns in the advancement of their personal, socio-economic and political agendas. In fact, Beckett dedicated Catastrophe to a Czech playwright by the name of Václav Havel, who was imprisoned several times for his dissident political views (with the longest occurring from May of 1979 to February of 1983).

Another popular interpretation postulates a simile between theater and divine creation, with Catastrophe functioning as a satire of the creator/artist/director's right, power and prerogative to control the work thus have created.

Beckett's version of the play contemplates the actor as an elderly man, but a number of theater companies have raised variations on these themes by recasting the protagonist as a beautiful young woman (think, #metoo or #timesup) or a black actor, who the director and his assistant attempt to make as white as possible.

Samuel Beckett (1906-1989) is widely recognized as one of the greatest dramatists of the 20th century. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1969. He is most renowned for his play Waiting for Godot, which launched his career in theatre. He then went on to write numerous successful full-length plays, including Endgame in 1957, Krapp's Last Tape in 1958 and Happy Days in 1960.

Beckett received his first commission for radio from the BBC in 1956 for All That Fall. This was followed by a further five plays for radio including Embers, Words and Music and Cascando. Like no other dramatist before him, Beckett's works capture the pathos and ironies of modern life yet still maintain his faith in man's capacity for compassion and survival no matter how absurd his environment may have become.

Ghostbird has not given any intimation of what, if any, interpretations, modifications or surprises it may have in store relative to their guerilla theater performance of the four-page, one-act play. However, it is likely that the site it chooses for Catastrophe will bear on the interpretation Ghostbird brings to bear.

Ghostbird is the only theater company in the American South devoted to site-specific work. And it's precisely because Ghostbird works hard to partner with just the right venue for each of its productions that it has been recognized as one of the 10 best companies in Florida for live theater.

With shows such as ORBS! and The Perfect Island of Dr Teed (held at Koreshan State Historic Site in Estero), Writing Shadows (staged at the historic Langford-Kingston Home in the downtown Fort Myers River District) Antigonick (staged at artist Marcus Jansen's warehouse-based art studio in Fort Myers), No. 27 (performed at Bonita Springs' historic Shangri-La Springs) and The Chicken Play (performed outdoors under the super moon and inside the screened pavilion at the Happehatchee Center in Estero), Ghostbird has taken tremendous strides in just the past two seasons in developing performances in which the play and setting converse with one another.

The experimental theatre company takes its name from a swamp-dwelling ivory-billed woodpecker once thought to be extinct, but which has been spotted sporadically over the past two decades. Drawing upon the elusiveness, mystery and magic of its namesake, Ghostbird Theatre seeks to draw its audiences into those deep spiritual woods where they can discover loss, beauty, communion, reconciliation and hope.

Six homes in historic Dean Park near downtown Fort Myers will showcase Southwestern Florida history and Craftsman-style architecture when they are open to the public this Saturday, March 24 from noon to 4 p.m.

Dean Park, just east of downtown

Fort Myers, was designated a historic district in 1997 and named to the National Register of Historic Places in 2013. It was the vision of John Morgan Dean, a wealthy developer from Rhode Island, who began building homes in the neighborhood in 1916 and recorded "Dean Park" as one of the city's earliest subdivisions in 1920.

The houses on the tour include Shangri-La, an old Florida style home built on Billy's Creek in 1922, and the elegant Robb house, built on Rhode Island Avenue in the English Arts and Crafts style by Virgil C. Robb, the co-founder of the Robb and Stucky Furniture Company.

On First Street, once dubbed Millionaires' Row, visitors can walk through the impressive home first owned by Dr. Gordon Henry and his wife, Esther. The house still retains its original stone columns, exposed beam ceilings, wide eaves and expansive porches that are the hallmark of the Craftsman style.

Three other homes complete the tour: a handsome 1921 bungalow - now beautifully landscaped - located on Providence Street and originally owned by Judge George Whitehurst and his wife, Myra; a charming 1930s cottage facing Palm Avenue; and a Michigan Avenue home that is one of at least six similar bungalows constructed on that street by early Fort Myers developer Henry C. Case.

Tickets are $20 per person and can be purchased in advance at www.deanpark.org or at Remedies Parlor, 2541 Thompson Street and at Zero In Real Estate, 2256 First Street in downtown Fort Myers. Tickets will also be available on the day of the tour for $25 at the information/registration table in The Triangle, a small park located at the corner of Providence Street and Rhode Island Avenue in Dean Park. A rain date is scheduled for Sunday, March 25, also from noon to 4 p.m. Refreshments will be offered at three of the homes.

The 9th annual GoldenFest will be held at the Doggy Heaven canine park at the Shell Factory & Nature Park in North Fort Myers this Sunday, March 25 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. It is hosted

TIMOTHY HAYS VOLLMER

On Thursday, March 2, 2018, Tim Vollmer of Baltimore, formerly of Sanibel Island, Florida, passed away. He was the beloved son of William and Mary (nee Hays) Vollmer; dear brother of Jeff Vollmer and his wife Shannon; devoted grandson of Julia K. Hays; loving uncle of Will, Lila, and Jack Vollmer; cherished nephew of Thomas A. Hays VI.

Tim grew up on Sanibel Island where he played little league and other youth sports, enjoyed summer recreation and spent time fishing and canoeing with his family. He attended Sanibel Elementary School and the Canterbury School in Fort Myers before graduating from the Eaglebrook School in Deerfield, Massachusetts. At Eaglebrook, Tim excelled at snowboarding and was a member of the school's competitive snowboarding team. He also learned how to create stained glass. After he graduated from Eaglebrook, Tim attended The Lawrenceville School in Lawrenceville, New Jersey. At Lawrenceville, Tim played football, wrestled and served as president of his dormitory (Kinnan) during his senior year. Tim graduated from Lawrenceville in 2000 and matriculated at Ithaca College in Ithaca, New York. At Ithaca, Tim majored in English and continued to develop his lifelong love of reading and writing.

After he graduated from Ithaca in 2005, Tim's life led him to a wide range of experiences in different corners of this country. He lived on Sanibel, where he became part of the Lazy Flamingo family and developed a passion for wakeboarding. Tim lived in Tucson, Arizona, where he studied the art of jujutsu at Martial Arts of Tucson and earned the nickname "Blood" from his friends. Most recently, Tim lived in Baltimore, Maryland, where he was born. There, he became part of the Petit Louis Bistro family, and continued to pursue his athletic interests at Crossfit Arenal. Over the years, he also spent time with his family in Bethany Beach, Delaware, and joined his brother for adventures in fishing, camping, golfing and Guns N' Roses concerts.

Tim loved dogs, movies, books, music and games. He taught himself to play acoustic guitar and never stopped writing creatively. He will be missed.

A Service of Remembrance will be held at St. Michael and All Angels Church on Sanibel Island in Florida on

Former NFL Star Subject Of Documentary

The 8th annual Fort Myers Film Festival (FMff), which takes place March 21 through 25, will feature a short documentary on Florida State University alum and Super Bowl Champion Anquan Boldin and his charity efforts throughout his hometown of Pahokee, Florida.

Full Circle will screen in the grand atrium of the Sidney & Berne Davis Art Center on Saturday, March 24 at 4 p.m.

Directed by award-winning filmmaker Raymond Knudsen, Full Circle is among more than 90 films that will be screened during the festival's five-day run.

Boldin always knew his life was bigger than football. Despite a 1999 BCS national championship with Florida State University, 2013 Super Bowl championship with the Baltimore Ravens and a likely future spot in the NFL Hall of Fame, Boldin's life mission has always been to benefit the lives of the less fortunate in all the communities he has played for as well as his hometown. Boldin was awarded the 2015 NFL Man of the Year honors for his philanthropic efforts off the field and also retired from the NFL in 2017 in order to fully commit his time to helping others.

Growing up 30 minutes away in the suburbs of Wellington, Florida, Knudsen experienced a way of living that was far different than one in Pahokee. Following an early start in the industry highlighted with a 2014 scholarship from the Hollywood superstar and FSU alum Burt Reynolds, along with a plethora of festival screenings around the country, Knudsen was accepted into the national renowned film program at Florida State University. The program assigns students with a documentary project that allows them to travel throughout the country during the month of March to capture any story of their choice. With a passion in football and newly discovered desire to tell meaningful stories, Knudsen came across Boldin's touching story and began developing Full Circle, which highlights Boldin's charity efforts throughout Pahokee.

"I grew tremendously as an individual and filmmaker throughout this process. Traveling throughout and learning about a place that I grew up so close to was very enlightening and humbling" said Knudsen, director and producer of the documentary, which features interviews with members of Boldin's family and displays the true kindness of Boldin's efforts to the less fortunate. Boldin created a non-profit organization in 2004 known as the Q81 Foundation, and is dedicated to expanding the educational and life opportunities of underprivileged children with opportunities such as a scholarship program, toy drives and an annual Q-Fest that has been the cornerstone in generating resources to sustain the charitable giving Anquan and his family is dedicated to.

The short documentary has screened at over 15 festivals around the country, and will be screening on South Florida PBS later this year as part of their filmmaker program that plans to bring well-needed exposure to over 50 South Florida stories.

"The plan from here on out is to make films and documentaries with a positive message just like this one," said Knudsen. "I hope this documentary inspires others in and out of the public spotlight to give back to others like Boldin has."

All Florida Juried Opening Exhibit At Alliance

Artists from all over Florida submitted more than 530 pieces for consideration in the Alliance for the Arts' Annual All Florida Juried Exhibition recently. The juror, Mark Ormond, narrowed the list to 57 pieces which were unveiled to the public during an opening celebration on March 9. The exhibit will continue until March 29.

Betsy Djamoos was awarded $1,000 for Best in Show for her abstract piece Natural Vibrations. Elisabeth Arena took second place and won a $250 Golden Colors Gift Certificate for her for her graphite work The Contemplative Crow. Gay Germain won $100 and placed third for her acrylic piece Sculpture Garden Reductive III. David Belling, Sherry Rohl, Tammra Sigler and Buck Ward were awarded Juror's Choice Awards.

"My intuition guides my palette, brush strokes and knowing when the painting is finished," said Djamoos. "All my paintings start out with intuitive marks on a white canvas, and the piece evolves from that flow."

Festival To Screen Horror Short Film

Manhattanville College student's critically acclaimed short film The Little Chapel will be screened at Sidney & Berne Davis Art Center on Saturday, March 24 as part of the Fort Myers Film Festival.

The acclaimed, award-winning horror short is director Richard Schertzer's tale of a young girl attempting to bring back her dead friend, but getting more than what she bargained for. Horror is something that the director wanted to get into after making a love story-centric music video called A Certain Smile. It was made as part of a video production project on a base budget of nothing and produced outside of the college's main film club Manhattanville Video Project.

Schertzer made it with Jessica Cinquemani as the star and Janae Fells, Jenna Nance and Bruno Bucsan as the sound department. The short was made on a budget of nothing and some borrowed film equipment for the class.

Not only did the film revitalize the horror genre at Schertzer's college of Manhattanville in Purchase, New York, it has also received international acclaim, being screened and nominated at such festivals as the IHorror awards, being nominated for Best Horror Short, Alternative Film Festival, being nominated for Best Poster, The Best Film Fest, where Cinquemani won a Rising Star Award for her performance, Oniros Film Awards, where the film was nominated for Best Under 5 Minute Film and won Best Poster and The Festival de Cinema Escolar de Alvorada, where it was nominated for Best Movie and Best Art Direction.

The screening at Fort Myers Film Festival is part of The Little Chapel's campaign to promote the Horror Extended Universe (HEU), which is a shared cinematic universe used to promote any horror films made under Wyvern Studios.

Tickets are $10, $6 before 3 p.m. or $20 for an all-day pass

Sidney & Berne Davis Art Center is located at 2301 First Street in Fort Myers. For more information, contact Richard Schertzer at 301-801-6790 or email at wyvernstudios.richard@gmail.com.*

Peregrina

by Gerri Reaves

Peregrina (Jatropha intergerrima) is an ornamental tree or shrub native to Cuba and the West Indies.

Despite its non-native status, even native-plant and butterfly enthusiasts appreciate it as a nectar plant. This member of the spurge family can grow up to 15 feet tall with a wide spread, developing a slender trunk and branches. However, it usually reaches only about eight or nine feet.

The large evergreen leaves are about six inches long and vary widely in shape. Some are shaped like a fiddle, and others are irregularly lobed or even have three pointed lobes.

The bright red clusters of flowers bloom throughout the year. Five-petaled and about an inch across, they attract hummingbirds and butterflies such

Peregrina has evergreen leaves and showy flowers that bloom all year and attract hummingbirds and butterflies as monarchs, swallowtails and zebra longwings.

The flowers' vivid color gives the plant another common name, firecracker. It is also called simply jatropha.

The six-lobed fruit is round or oval and less than an inch long. When dry, it explodes and disperses the speckled seeds that are very toxic to humans.

The milky sap is toxic too and can irritate the skin, so be careful when handling the plant.

Avoid planting peregrine in an area where children or pets have access.

Give it a well-drained spot in full sun or partial shade. It adapts to a range of soil conditions and is drought tolerant but not salt tolerant.

It can be trained to grow on a wall or lattice or used as a container plant.

Boaters Be Aware Of Manatees

Chances of close encounters between Florida manatees and boaters increase in the spring.

For manatees, it is the season when they leave their winter refuges and travel along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts and through inland waters. For boaters, it is a critical time to be on the lookout for manatees to avoid colliding with these large aquatic mammals.

"Spring is a great time to go boating in Florida, but manatees are out there too. Please watch out for them," said Ron Mezich, who heads the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) manatee management program.

From April 1 through Nov. 15, seasonal manatee zones require boaters to slow down in certain areas to prevent manatees from being struck by motorboats or personal watercrafts. FWC law enforcement officers are on patrol in state waters to remind boaters of the seasonal manatee speed zones and take enforcement actions when appropriate.

Since manatees are difficult to detect when underwater, operators of boats and personal watercrafts can help by:

FWC biologists, managers and law enforcement staff work closely with partners to evaluate current data and identify necessary actions to protect this iconic animal. Florida has invested over $2 million annually for manatee conservation, and the FWC works toward continued success for manatees in our state.

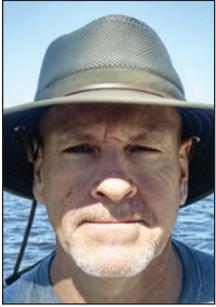

Manatee zones and maps are available at www.myfwc.com/manatee, where you can select "Protection Zones" for links to county maps. Boaters can get tips from A boater's guide to living with Florida Manatees. And if you want to see manatees in the wild or captivity, visit www.myfwc.com/education/wildlife/manatee/where-to-see/.

To support the FWC's manatee research, rescue and management efforts, purchase a Save the Manatee Florida license plate at www.buyaplate.com, or donate $5 to receive an FWC manatee decal by going to www.myfwc.com/manatee and clicking on "Decals."✧

CROW Case Of The Week:

Limpkin

by Bob Petcher

The limpkin (Aramus guarauna) is an odd-looking bird that also goes by the name crying bird, most likely for its unmistakable piercing wails. It is also called carrao or courlan.

While a full-sized limpkin looks more like a heron or ibis, its skeletal makeup more closely resembles a crane. It has tall, long legs with a long beak. It is distinguishable by its mostly brown body that sports white spots throughout. One can usually see this type of bird in marshes and swampy forests.

What makes the limpkin unique is its diet. It feeds almost exclusively on apple snails, which are regularly found in the aquarium trade but are also wild in Florida ditches and ponds. The limpkin's long and heavy bill helps pry shells of apple snails apart then cuts through the muscle to pull the snail out in a quick process that generally takes less than half a minute. While apple snails are the limpkin's preferred primary source of food, they can also dine on frogs, lizards, worms, insects and other crustaceans if needed.

While the limpkin is not on the country's birds watch list, it is regarded as a species of "high concern." It was hunted to near extinction some 100 years ago, but legal protection aided in its species revival.

At CROW, an adult limpkin was admitted with... a limp. The bird was initially brought to one of the clinic's drop-off locations. The finder noted that the bird was found "caught in fishing line," but no location of where the bird was found was provided.

Upon examination at intake, the limpkin's left foot was noted to have swelling over the metatarsophalangeal joint. X-rays showed the left foot had no fractures and no obvious joint involvement.

"The metatarsophalangeal joint is the joint just above the foot, which looks like an ankle on people, but actually correlates to the joints between the foot and the toes," said Dr. Malka Spektor, CROW veterinary intern. "The joint is used in birds to stand and move the feet."

CROW medical staff also noticed one of the patient's toes on its right foot had a P3 amputation.

While the toe amputation was questioned as a causal effect of the monofilament line, Dr. Spektor stated that was not the case.

"The amputation appears to be an old injury that is fully healed," she said. "It is just missing a portion of one toe, which should not hinder the patient."

An infection may cause a delay in the limpkin's recovery process.

"The next step for the patient is to reduce the swelling in the foot, and to ensure it does not affect the joint. A major concern is an infection present in the area, even though one was not present on initial testing," said Dr. Spektor. "The limpkin is on antibiotics and pain medication to target the swelling and hopefully improve it."

The patient was provided with fluids, pain medications and soft footing in its enclosure. It was also provided with apple snails.

"The foot is still swollen this weekend," said Dr. Spektor on March 18. "A regional limb perfusion (to treat the infection) is planned to focus the antibiotics directly to the area. Once the swelling is controlled, the patient will be moved outside to regain strength prior to release."

Back To A Winter Fishing Pattern Yet Again

by Capt. Matt Mitchell

Yet again, plunging water temperatures brought on by another cold front totally switched our fishing back to a winter pattern even though the calendar says its spring. Just as water temperatures had begun to rebound, a few really cold days quickly dropped it back to a chilly winter-like 62 degrees in the sound. Although this cold weather brings the snook bite to a complete stop, other species turned on and kept the action going.

Sheepshead and black drum became our target species again while hiding from the wind and trying to stay warm and comfortable. Fishing with chunks of shrimp in areas around the passes and docks caught lots of keeper-sized sheepshead. One surprise this week was finding a new dock that produced lots of black drum of all sizes. One cold blustery day, we manage to catch four legal-sized black drum ranging from 16 inches to 24 inches while fishing this dock. The smaller black drum are great to eat and put up a good battle on light tackle. We caught these black drum for three days in a row when returning back to this same dock.

With a colder than average March playing out for us, shrimp fishing will remain the daily go-to until our water temperatures rebound. During the few days that we experience south winds and warmer weather just before the passing of a cold front, it's worth giving shiners or pinfish a try. Until our water temperature creeps back into the high 60s, shrimp are going to give you the best action. Both live shrimp and shrimp chunks are giving my anglers the best opportunity to not only catch a wide variety of species but to go home with dinner too. Every species of fish that swims in our waters will eat shrimp and, during these cold water periods, a small profile bait like a shrimp will get a bite when simply nothing else will.

Some of the week's best action came while fishing with chunks of fresh shrimp. Breaking of the tail of the shrimp and threading it on the hook backwards before pinching off the head not only makes a very small compact offering but also puts scent in the water. Although I'm seeing lots of bigger sheepshead in the clearer water areas, the better bite has come in the more churned-up water closer to the passes. Look for some of the better sheepshead fishing around the docks within close proximity of the passes. While fishing these docks, you may get surprised with a variety of other species including drum, redfish and pompano.

String Quartet Wraps Up Season For Music Festival

The St. Lawrence String Quartet, renowned for the intensity of its performances, will conclude the Sanibel Music Festival on Tuesday, March 27 at 7:30 p.m. in the intimate setting of Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ.

This acclaimed Canadian string quartet returns with a fresh format for the first half of the concert, called Haydn Discovery. Before Haydn, in string quartets the first violin was primary and the other three instruments were mostly accompaniment. Haydn was the inventor of the modern string quartet, in which all four voices are equal. Geoff Nuttall, first violinist and founding member of the quartet, will explore a Haydn quartet from various perspectives, and then the quartet will perform the work in its entirety. Other quartet members are Owen Dalby, violin; Lesley Robertson, viola; and Christopher Costanza, cello.

Alex Ross of The New Yorker magazine wrote: "The St. Lawrence are remarkable not simply for the quality of their music making, exalted as it is, but for the joy they take in the act of connection."

The program: Haydn Discovery, with Haydn Op. 20 No. 5, discussion and performance; Tchaikovsky Quartet No. 3. Tickets may be purchased for $50 each by calling 344-7025, or online at www.sanibelmusicfestival.org Tickets may also be purchased at the door one half hour before the performance or at Bank of the Islands, 1699 Periwinkle Way.

Ventriloquist To Appear At Estero Arena

Germain Arena will be one of the stops for record-breaking global comedy superstar Jeff Dunham, who is bringing his cast of characters on the road during a tour of North America through spring 2018.

The 60-city Passively Aggressive tour will come to Germain Arena on Thursday, April 26 at 7 p.m. Tickets are $48.50.

Dunham, known as America's favorite ventriloquist, released his latest stand-up special, Jeff Dunham: Relative Disaster, on Netflix in September 2017. The special, filmed in Dublin, Ireland, features Dunham along with his ill-behaved and slightly demented posse of characters for a gleeful skewering of family and politics. Dunham and his famous cohorts Walter, Achmed the Dead Terrorist, Bubba J and Peanut also consider what a new member to their already dysfunctional family could mean, putting the 'relative' in Relative Disaster.

Dunham, a Guinness world-record holder for "Most Tickets Sold for a Stand-up Comedy Tour," has built an entertainment empire over years of non-stop touring and innovation. With over a million YouTube subscribers amassing over a billion views, he has carved out his own unique space in the comedy world, leading to record-breaking viewership with his comedy specials on Comedy Central and NBC. His 2015 stand-up special Jeff Dunham: Unhinged in Hollywood debuted on NBC Primetime and ranked as the time period's top non-sports program on the Big 4 in every key measure.

Dunham received a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame, commemorating over two decades of superstardom. "When I moved to Los Angeles in 1988 with a car full of clothes and a couple of dummies, never in my wildest dreams did I imagine that one day I would be tripping over my own star on the Walk of Fame," he said. "It's truly fantastic and a great honor. I just hope it's not in front of an adult store. Okay, actually, that would be hilarious."

The Germain Arena is located at 11000 Everblades Parkway in Estero. For tickets, call 800-745-3000 or visit www.jeffdunham.com.*

Conservancy Benefit Raises $1.9 Million

The Conservancy of Southwest Florida recently raised a record $1.9 million net at the 14th annual Magic Under the Mangroves gala and auction, providing key funding that directly enhances the Conservancy's mission of protecting Southwest Florida's water, land, wildlife and future.

The four-hour, eco-chic event held Thursday, March 8 at the conservancy's Nature Center featured cocktails, hors d'oeuvres and a seated dinner by award-winning, certified green caterer Windows Catering, of Washington D.C. Led by chef Henry Dinardo, the team traveled to Naples exclusively for Magic Under the Mangroves gala.

"Henry and I made Naples our winter home in large part because of the area's natural beauty," said Carol Dinardo, chair of Magic Under the Mangroves and Conservancy of Southwest Florida board member. "When we learned about the conservancy's mission to protect the region's water, land, wildlife and future, getting involved was a natural fit for us."

The theme of the 2018 Fund-A-Need: Inspire, Ignite, Invest focused on the conservancy's internship program. Each year, the conservancy receives more than 300 applications for approximately 26 internship positions. Interns support all areas of the conservancy including the wildlife rehabilitation in the von Arx Wildlife Hospital, sea turtle research, educational outreach, advocacy efforts and much more. The interns gain valuable career experience while allowing the conservancy to expand its mission. Additionally, the conservancy offers interns the opportunity to live on site in the Blair Dormitory and a stipend.

"On behalf of the entire team, our supporters, sponsors, board of directors, staff and volunteers, I am blown away by the generosity in support of our mission," said Rob Moher, president and CEO of the conservancy. "The funds raised will enable our devoted teams of researchers, biologists, educators, policy specialists, wildlife rehabilitation specialists and interns to advance our mission of protecting Southwest Florida's natural environment."

The event was presented by Northern Trust, and William Raveis Real Estate was the supporting sponsor. Media sponsors included Florida Weekly, Gulfshore Life magazine, Naples Daily News and NBC-2. NBC-2 Anchor Chad Oliver served as the guest emcee of the event.

Elementary STEM Club To Learn Coding

The STEM Club at Allen Park Elementary recently took the next step in their Year in Space education program for Amateur Radio on the International Space Station (ARISS). The students learned the basics of computer coding in a before school lesson.

A select group of students at Allen Park may speak to an astronaut on board the International Space Station in the near future, possibly in the fall when they return to class.

The simple commands for their Sphero robots were taught to them by Tim Bennett from Cape Coral Utilities and the Fort Myers Amateur Radio Club. The lesson was tied to space exploration and how the Mars Rover works.

Allen Park Elementary is the first school in Lee County chosen to participate in the ARISS program, and one of just 14 for the next session.

Century Link is providing the ham radio connection needed for the students to communicate with the ISS crew as they pass overhead. FGCU is providing education support and a telescope to observe the ISS as it passes overhead.

The students at Allen Park also continue to participate in NASA's Train like an Astronaut - Walk to the Moon challenge, tracking their steps until they reach the 478 million steps it would take to walk to the moon. They have also planted a garden of "space tomatoes" that should be ready for harvest next month.✧

FMPD To Help Distribute Cadet Blessing Bags

The Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps (JROTC) program at Cypress Lake High School has adopted Operation Blessing Bags as their service learning project for 2017-18. The mission is to construct 250 fabric bags and fill them with a wide variety of gifts and supplies that area first responders can distribute to victims of trauma, accidents or criminal acts to assist in their recovery. Each bag is hand made by the cadets and contains a blanket, a bottle, a book and a variety of age appropriate items from toys to lip balm.

The cadets collected donations from area merchants and held fund raisers to purchase additional supplies to make bags for age groups that included children up to age 11, teens and the elderly.

The Fort Myers Police Department and several other law enforcement and emergency agencies were selected to receive the blessing bags and distribute them to their personnel for use in helping the public.

"In the execution of our duties we will often come to the assistance of children and families who have gone through a traumatic experience," said Lt. Willie Tellis of the Fort Myers Police Department. "Being able to present them with one of these blessing bags can help sooth some of the stress they are going through."

Every year, the JROTC program at Cypress Lake High identifies, selects, organizes and executes a service learning project, which is an extensive, entirely cadet-run community service project. For more information on the school's JROTC program and their outreach projects, contact Major Paulette Provost, the instructor at 481-2233 or PauletteBP@leeschools.net.*

Joint Effort To Promote Equity In Workforce

The FutureMakers Coalition, a regional collective impact initiative, recently announced a strategic project co-designed by Immokalee Technical College (iTech), Fort Myers Technical College (FMTC) and the Hendry County School District to reach its goal of increasing the percent of college graduates and residents with advanced certifications in Southwest Florida (55 percent by the year 2025).

The partnership, titled the Technical and Adult Education Completion program, aims to improve access to information, awareness and perception of regional educational opportunities among historically underserved or un-/underemployed adults in Immokalee, Hendry County and Fort Myers. Further, the initiative aims to ensure students complete their degree and/or certificate programs so they can join the workforce in their desired industry.

"In Southwest Florida, students of color are less likely to complete a degree or technical education program than their white counterparts. This points to a systems-level problem," said Tessa LeSage, director of social innovation and sustainability for the Southwest Florida Community Foundation, backbone organization for the FutureMakers

Coalition. "By working together, we can begin to remove barriers that produce such inequalities and create the skilled workforce local employers need."

Due to its collaborative approach involving three separate institutions, the initiative is unlike any other. By combining efforts, the institutions will have a greater impact and be able to better support the individuals involved. The program will involve multiple approaches to increase access to training and removing barriers to completion, including grassroots, one-on-one outreach, digital marketing, public relations, community relations as well as the use of predictive analytics to help understand where students are falling through the cracks and increased support once students enter into the programs.

Programs at each institution vary, but industries of study include health science, human services, business administration, information technology, cybersecurity, mechanics, manufacturing, machining, digital media design, culinary arts, education and more. General Educational Development (GED) and English Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) courses are also available.

Prospective students can learn more about the programs at each college by visiting their respective websites: www.hendryadultlearning.org for Hendry County; www.itech.edu/adultlearningprogram for Immokalee; and adultlearningprogram.fortmyerstech.edu for Fort Myers.*

Housing Authority Receives High Scores By HUD

Lee County Housing Authority (LCHA) recently received a High Performance status in the Public Housing Assessment System (PHAS) report for 2017, according to Marcus D. Goodson, executive director of the agency.

HUD's Real Estate Assessment Center (REAC) effectively and fairly measures the performance of a public housing agency using the PHAS. As the centralized system of REAC, the Integrated Assessment Subsystem electronically collects individual subsystem scores, produces a composite PHAS score and communicates the results that represent a PHA's management performance.

The PHAS scored LCHA 93 points out of a possible 100. PHAS indicators used for the scoring included physical, financial, management and resident reviews as well as financial sub-indicators including current ratio, months expendable funds balance, tenant receivable outstanding, occupancy loss, net income and expense management.

The LCHA oversees 142 low-income rental units at three sites in North Fort Myers and administers 271 vouchers in Lee County.

The mission of the LCHA is to assist low-income families with safe, decent and affordable housing opportunities as they strive to achieve self-sufficiency and improve their lives. The LCHA is committed to operating in an efficient, ethical and professional manner, and will create and maintain partnerships with its clients and appropriate community agencies in order to accomplish this mission.

Programs offered through LCHA include public housing, Section 8 Housing Vouchers, Family Self-Sufficiency and Resident Opportunity Self Sufficiency.

Food Campaign Targets Seasonal Residents

Lee County Solid Waste has created Donated not Wasted, a food rescue campaign to encourage seasonal residents and visitors to donate unopened pantry items before returning north.

About 70,000 tons, or 13 percent, of the waste stream in Lee County is food, according to a 2016 waste audit. Nationwide, Americans throw out about 30 percent of the available food supply.

To help reduce those numbers, unopened canned or dry goods can be dropped off at any Lee County Library System location or Lee County recreation center through Monday, April 2. Additional collection containers are located at the Six Mile Cypress Slough and the Topaz Court Household Chemical Waste Facility.

Lee County Solid Waste is asking the public to join the effort along with its partners – the Harry Chapin Food Bank, Waste Pro, FOX4, the Lee County Library System and Lee County Parks & Recreation – to help route food that might otherwise end up in the waste stream to the county's population of people in need.

High Schools Hold Ceremonies For Shooting Victims

Before school started on March 14, the students at South Fort Myers High School took part in one of many ceremonies to honor and remember the victims from Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School. In a powerful display, they formed the shape of a heart and lit up the early morning sky with their phones to pay tribute to 17 lives lost.

Several other Lee County Schools honored the victims killed one month ago.

At Cypress Lakes High School, approximately 100 students gathered outside and used chalk to write some of the victim's names on the ground or messages of hope.

Riverdale students planned an activity called 17 for 17. They set up a table in the cafeteria for students to take a pledge to incorporate something good in their everyday life. Those written pledges were then posted on a large poster that said "Take a pledge for 17."

Esterio High School set 17 chairs in the school's main courtyard, each with a picture of one of 14 students and three teachers killed, while kind words were spoken about each person.

East Lee County High School wore blue in unity and students posted their own words of kindness on a banner in the cafeteria.

Bonita Springs High School observed a moment of silence and had thoughtful conversations between students, staff, teachers and administrators.*

throughout the Southeastern U.S. He is a graduate of Georgia State University in Atlanta, Georgia where he earned a bachelor of business administration degree in finance, and subsequently became a holder of the chartered financial analyst designation. FutureMakers Receives $5,000 Arthrex Grant

The FutureMakers Coalition received $5,000 from Arthrex Inc., a global orthopedic surgical device company based in Naples.

According to Tessa LeSage, director of Social Innovation and Sustainability for the Southwest Florida Community Foundation, the backbone organization for the coalition, the grant will be used as gap funding support for students attending the machining program at Immokalee Technical College.

"The partners in our pilot program, Lee Health, Fort Myers Technical College, Cape Coral Technical College and CareerSource of Southwest Florida, aimed to increase enrollment and fill entry-level positions in nursing and it resulted in more than 80 percent of Lee Health's persistent certified nursing assistant vacancies being filled as a result of aligning the systems and providing assistance to students in areas of known barriers," said LeSage. "These new funds will be used in the same manner, to provide students with gap funding to guide them through program enrollment and completion, which will ultimately earn them a certificate in machining, an in-demand workforce need."

The project involves coalition partners in business, education, philanthropy and workforce working together to identify and bridge gaps and barriers in the system. In addition to improved systemic support, "gap funding" is cultivated and provided to students in all areas of program enrollment and completion where they might otherwise have been lost in the system, including application fees, test fees, supplies (uniforms, books, etc.) and certification exam fees.

"Machining is an in-demand job that employers are seeking qualified candidates for, and this program seeks to partner with local employers, including Arthrex, to graduate students with this certification and incentivize their completion with the prospect of an interview/potential job," LeSage added. "While education is a key component of this program, so too is building a qualified and sustainable workforce in our local community."

"Arthrex is pleased to support the FutureMakers Coalition and enhance educative programs that not only allow students to develop the necessary skills for specific careers at Arthrex, but also provide our community's future workforce with opportunities to learn and grow," said Lisa Gardiner, communications manager and member of Arthrex's Charitable Giving Committee.

The FutureMakers Coalition's goal is to transform the local workforce by increasing the number of Southwest Florida residents with degrees, certificates and other high-quality credentials to 55 percent by the year 2025.

The FutureMakers Coalition encourages residents to join and support this community-changing initiative. For more information, visit www.futuremakerscoalition.com, call 274-5900 or email Tessa LeSage at TLeSage@floridacommunity.com.✪

Celebrities To Talk About Being In The Spotlight

The Cause an Effect celebrity panel discussion – featuring Randy Wayne White, bestselling author of the Doc Ford and Hannah Smith series of novels; Porter Goss, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency and U.S. Congressman; and longtime NBC-2 News anchor Kellie Burns – will share stories of their good and not-so-good times on the world's biggest stages at a one-night-only event at The Community House on Thursday, March 29 at 6 p.m.

The conversation will be moderated by Brian Hummel, MD, FACS, a cardiothoracic surgeon at Shipley Cardiothoracic Center at HealthPark Medical Center in Fort Myers. Tickets are $150 each and can be reserved by calling 343-6058 or emailing jeff.muddell@leehealth.org. Heavy hors d'oeuvres and cocktails will be served.

Every day, Dr. Hummel is called upon to perform complex surgical procedures on patients from all across Southwest Florida and beyond. While the pressures are unique to his field, it got him to think about how others deal with the strains of performing at their best.

"Everyone of us – whether you are an author or accountant, a government official or a grade school teacher – deals with the stresses of performance in their workplace and their life," said Dr. Hummel. "I just thought it would be great to sit down with this panel, all have seen and done so much in their days and have been wildly successful, to talk about when the pressures got the best of them and they didn't perform at the top of their game. What happened? How did they get through? They can provide us some important lessons."

White's path to bestselling and award-winning author has taken him around the world. He skipped college, has worked as a farm hand, a brass and iron foundry worker, a telephone lineman, and, for 13 years, a full-time fishing guide at Tarpon Bay Marina on Sanibel Island. He was a columnist for many years for Outside magazine before settling into his role as novelist of the world-famous Doc Ford novels and becoming part of Sanibel's lore.

Goss' time on the world stage took a decidedly different tack. He was a U.S. Army Intelligence officer from 1960 to 1962. He served in the Central Intelligence Agency from 1962 until 1972, completing assignments in Latin America, the Caribbean and Europe. His family then moved to Sanibel Island where he was active in the incorporation of the City of Sanibel and served as its first mayor in 1974. He continued his public service as a member of the Lee County Commission (1983 to 1988, serving as chairman 1985 to 1986), then as U.S. congressman representing Southwest Florida and served for almost 16 years. In 2004, he became the 19th and last director of Central Intelligence before becoming the first director of the Central Intelligence Agency under the newly signed Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act in 2005.

Burns started at NBC-2 in 1994 as a reporter, working her way up to Collier County bureau chief, weekend anchor and finally primary anchor in 1996, currently anchoring the evening news. Originally from Upstate New York, she graduated from the State University of New York at Geneseo with a bachelor's degree in both communications and political science, and a minor in international relations. Red Sox-Yankee Rivalry Should Be A Headline Attraction In 2018

by Ed Frank

There is probably no other exciting and historic rivalry in all of sports as the one between the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees.

And as Spring Training moves into its final days, there are strong indications that the battle between these two teams may once again stir strong, even bitter emotions, between Red Sox and Yankee fans throughout the 2018 season – and possibly beyond.

There are several facts for this reasoning:

The Yankees added slugger Giancarlo Stanton and his $325 million contract (largest in sports) to their roster. And teamed with All-Star Aaron Judge (56 home runs in 2017), they form an outfield tandem unmatched in baseball.

As for the Red Sox, who have won back-to-back American League Eastern Division Championships, the addition of outfielder J.D. Martinez (45 home runs in 119 games last season), provides Boston with the prestigious power they lacked last season upon the retirement of David Ortiz.

In addition, all of Boston's starting lineup returns this year.

Adding to the pending excitement of the new baseball season is the fact that both teams have new managers. Boston lured Alex Cora away from the World Champion Houston Astros after John Farrell was fired when his division champions were eliminated in the first round of postseason play two years in a row.

The new Yankee skipper is Aaron Boone who returns to New York after an eight-year career in broadcasting. He replaced Joe Girardi, who had managed the Yankees to a World Series title in 2009.

It is the first time in more than 25 years that both teams start the new season with rookie managers.

Boone holds a special place in Yankee history as the result of his Game Seven, 11th inning walk-off home run in the 2003 American League Championship Series against Boston. Despite his heroics, the Yankees lost to the Florida Marlins in the World Series.

Boston and New York had played 19 regular season games and seven post-season games that season before Boone's bottom of the 11th inning home run.

The Red Sox did go on to win the 2004 World Series, their first since 1918.

There are many great rivalries in sports, but few will argue that the Red Sox-Yankee battles will be on the top of most any list.

And the 2018 baseball season could be another one.

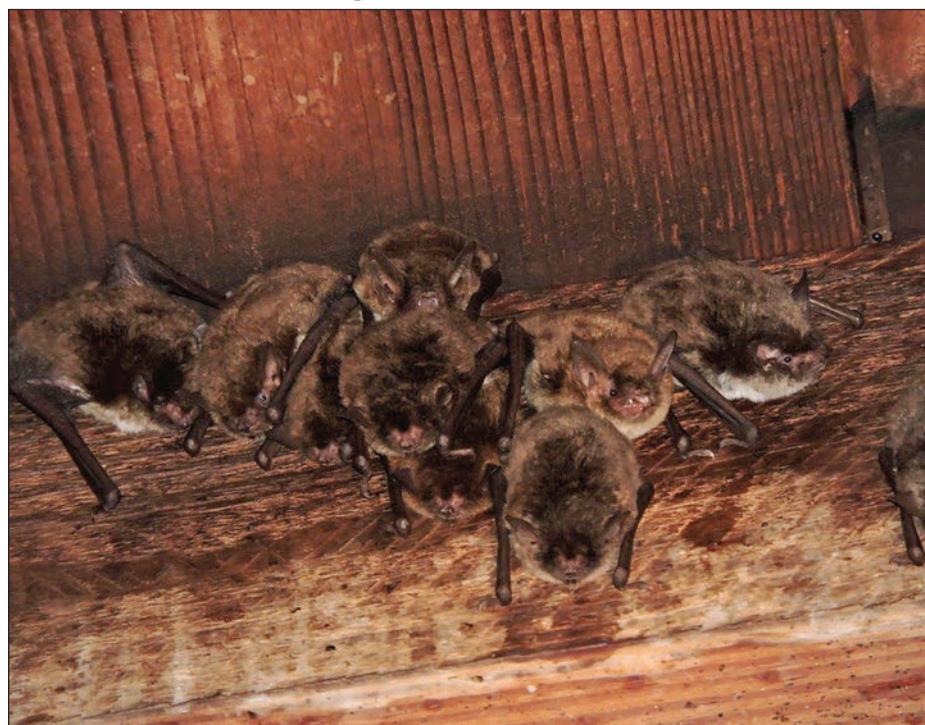

Twins Lose Shortstop Jorge Polanco In Drug Suspension

Earlier this week, the Minnesota Twins announced that starting shortstop Jorge Polanco had been suspended for 80 games by Major League Baseball for the use of performance enhancing drugs.

Polanco, 24, said he took a tainted combination of vitamin B12 and an iron supplement from his trainer in the Dominican Republic .

In 2017, Polanco hit .256 with 13 home runs and 74 RBIs. He is not eligible to return to the Twins lineup until June 30, and isn't eligible for postseason play. He also will lose several hundred thousand dollars in pay.✪

Florida's Bat Maternity Season To Begin April 15

Bats congregate before maternity season

If you have bats roosting in your attic, leaves or chimney spaces, now is the time to give them an eviction notice. Bat maternity season begins Sunday, April 15 and runs through August 15. Exclusions of bat colonies must be completed before the season starts.

"During bat maternity season, bats gather to give birth and raise their young," said Terry Doonan, a Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) biologist and mammal conservation coordinator. "The season lasts until the young bats can fly and feed themselves. In Florida, this occurs from mid-April through mid-August for most bat species."

Bat exclusions are illegal during this maternity season to prevent young bats that cannot yet fly from being trapped inside structures and dying.

Florida is home to 13 resident bat species, including threatened species such as the Florida bonneted bat. Some bat species roost in artificial structures, including buildings and houses. Although it is illegal to harm or kill bats in Florida, guidelines have been developed allowing for the legal exclusion of bats outside of

European Team Returns For Tarpon Tournament

Four journalists from Scotland, England and Denmark will return to fish and cover the 7th annual "Ding" Darling & Doc Ford's Tarpon Tournament on Friday, May 11. Already the overseas jibes have begun between the European Fish & Chips team – which last fished the 2015 tournament – and its U.S. counterparts.

"It's a real shame our American friends have to fly a team across the Atlantic to show them how to catch tarpon," joked Paul O'Hare with BBC Scotland.

"Good to see the tournament sold out so quickly when the locals heard the 'European Dream Team' were on their way back," quipped Jim Patrick from the UK, who writes for the daily Sun newspapers. "We wouldn't expect anything else. Our American friends showed us a great time before, but we hope they're ready to bring their A game to the water in May. They're gonna need it."

In 2015, the team took fifth place, despite having never fished for tarpon before. "We upset the odds in 2015 and are confident we can do so again," jibed O'Hare. "Bring it on."

Joining O'Hare and Patrick, teammate Paul Fenech is features editor for the UK's Sea Angler Magazine. Niels Lagergaard Pedersen from Denmark writes for the monthly Fiske Avisen. The combined circulation of the team's news and fishing publications exceeds 2.3 million readers.

"We just hope their writing is better than their fishing," jested Team Sportfisha, which beat Team Fish & Chips to first place in 2015. "Looked to us like the Fish & Chips were down. I hope they're brushing up their skills for handling a real fish."

The European team's participation was made possible through a partnership between the Lee County Visitor & Convention Bureau and the "Ding" Darling Wildlife Society-Friends of the Refuge (DDWS).

"The reporters are all avid anglers, but their first experience with tarpon was in 2015," said Birgie Miller, DDWS executive director and event organizer. "They proved themselves that year. The international element makes the tournament just that much more exciting."

DDWS sponsors the tournament along with title sponsor Doc Ford's Rum Bar & Grille and other local businesses and individuals. The tournament is unique locally because it pays out 100 percent of the entry fee as tournament awards. Registration this year for the 55 boats filled within two hours.

Tournament proceeds benefit wildlife and conservation education at JN "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge on Sanibel Island.

"Last year we raised $80,000 for the refuge as a result of sponsorships, donations and auction proceeds," said Miller. "We're so grateful to Doc Ford's and our other sponsors for this huge effort in our behalf."

For more information on the tournament, visit www.dingdarlingtarpontourney.org. Anyone interested in becoming a tournament sponsor should contact Sarah Lathrop at 472-1100 ext. 4.

Talk To Your Spouse About Retirement Vision

by Jennifer Basey

If you're single, your retirement goals are your own – you don't really have to consult with anybody, and you can change your plans whenever you like. However, if you're married, you and your spouse should develop a joint "vision" encompassing all the key areas of your retirement lifestyle.

These are a few questions you may want to address first:

Where should we live? Once you retire, you may need to consider two key aspects of your living situation: the size and location of your home. Regarding size, you may look around one day and realize you have more living space than you actually need. This is especially true, of course, if you have children who have set out on their own. So, if you have a large single-family house, you may want to consider whether you should move into a condominium or even an apartment, either of which might be more cost effective for you.

As for location, you may decide that retirement is the perfect time to move, either to seek a more favorable climate or to be near grown children and grandchildren. In any case, moving to a different area is a major financial decision, so you and your spouse will certainly want to discuss all the aspects of relocation.

Will either of us work? Retirement no longer means the cessation of all work. You or your spouse – or perhaps you and your spouse – may want to use your skills and experience to do some consulting or even open your own business. Adding a source of earned income will almost certainly help your financial picture during retirement, but if either you or your spouse is planning to do some work, you will want to be sure this activity doesn't disrupt other plans that may be important to you, such as traveling. Also, any source of earned income during your retirement years may well affect important financial decisions, such as when to take Social Security and how much to withdraw each year from your retirement accounts, such as your IRA and 401(k). Again, it's essential that you and your spouse be on the same page about any type of employment during retirement.

How will we spend our time? Aside from possibly doing some type of work during your retirement years, how else might you spend your time? Would you like to travel extensively? Or would you rather stick close to home and pursue your hobbies or volunteer? These don't have to be either-or decisions – hopefully, you'll be able to explore many pursuits during your retirement. Keep in mind, though, that there will be different costs for these various activities, so you and your spouse may need to prioritize your choices to ensure they fit into your overall financial strategies.

As you can see, you and your spouse will have some key decisions about the financial aspects of your retirement. However, with some careful planning, you can make the moves that can help you work toward your common retirement vision.

Stripes

by Linda Coin

Stripes are one of the most versatile decorating tools available. They can make a room look bigger or wider, more serene or bolder.

But, as with everything in life, too much of a good thing can sometimes be a bad thing. So here are a few helpful hints for your "striping" considerations:

1. Watch out for wide stripes with dark or bright colors. They tend to be overpowering. Use them in small quantities, where they can still be an attention getter, but the room won't be overpowered.

2. Keep in mind that the larger the room, the wider the stripe can be. Too small a stripe in a large living room could possibly get lost within the rest of your design plan.

3. A narrow vertical stripe works well in smaller rooms, particularly those with low ceilings – they will make your room appear taller by drawing your eye upward.

Stripes are truly the "great mixer." They are fantastic when coordinated with other patterns such as florals and plaids. If you want to create your own combinations, don't be afraid of the possibilities.

Just remember when mixing stripes with other patterns, be sure to find a common element – which will in most cases be color.

Book Review

End Game

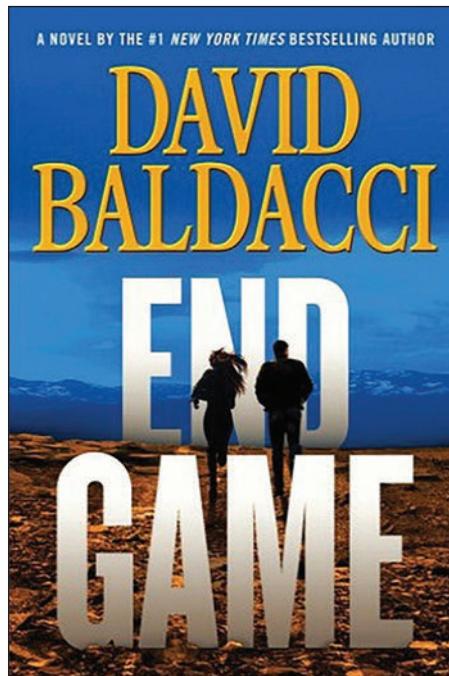

by Di Saggau

End Game, David Baldacci's explosive new thriller brings back two of his best characters, Will Robie and Jessica Reel. Reel is sarcastic and is not afraid to get into someone's face. Robie is quiet, sensitive and will hold back. Sometimes her abrasive behavior has adverse effects but they seem to feed off one another in a cohesive partnership. It's obvious that they care a lot for each other.

As the book begins, Robie is on a mission in London where he has to single-handedly take out a Jihadist terrorist cell, and Reel is in Iraq doing sniper duty for the military. Once these missions are completed, the two are asked to find their handler, The Blue Man, Roger Walton, who has gone missing in Grand, Colorado. Robie and Reel are two of the most lethal people alive. They're the ones the government calls in when the utmost secrecy is required to take out those who plot violence and mass destruction against the United States. Finding Blue Man is their highest priority. With no communications since he took a rare vacation to go fly fishing in his hometown, they can't help but fear the worst.

As Robie and Reel arrive in the small town of Grand, they discover that it has its own share of problems. The local economy is stagnant, the police force is understaffed and the small community has become a magnet for crime, drugs and a growing number of militant fringe groups. Lying in wait is a bigger threat, one that could shake the very foundation of America. Investigating hideaways for the super wealthy, in case the world implodes, pits the duo against an adversary with superior firepower and a home-court advantage. He was inspired by the TV show Breaking Bad so you get the picture.

End Game is a novel with a fast-action story. There's plenty of action, dealing with terrorists on both the domestic and international front. Robie and Reel have to use all their senses to confront and defeat the bad guys. Fans will not be disappointed in this thriller. The good news is, you know there's going to be another Robie and Reel book in the near future.*

an audiobook just by saying, "Alexa, read Alice in Wonderland." Alexa can also read aloud Kindle books that are text-to-speech compatible. Kids just have to say something like, "Alexa, read Fish in a Tree in Kindle Books." Right now, Google Home does not read books aloud.

Home assistants can help students who struggle with math. Kids can ask for basic calculations by saying, "What is the square root of 25?" or "What is 32 percent of 500 dollars?" If kids need help with unit conversions, they can say something like, "OK how many degrees Fahrenheit is 25 degrees Celsius?" If kids forget math formulas, they can get a reminder by saying, "How do you find the area of a circle?" Kids can even practice math by using an interactive tool called 1-2-3 Math. It asks various math problems in a quiz format. It's available as an Echo skill and as a Home action.

Home assistants can set timers, alarms and create to-do lists. Kids who have trouble staying on task for a certain amount of time can ask for a timer to be set for a certain number of minutes and then take a break and start again. Kids can ask for a reminder to start their homework at a specific time as well. Kids who have trouble keeping track of school assignments and chores can use a home assistant to create a to-do list.

With Echo, kids can add tasks to their list with a command like, "Alexa, put practice trumpet on my to-do list." To access the list, they can say, "Alexa, what's on my to-do list?" With Google Home, kids can use third-party apps to create and keep track of a to-do list.

Home assistants can manage calendar events. Keeping track of due dates and events can be tricky for kids with executive functioning issues. Home assistants let kids manage calendars by voice. They can add events with the command, "Add calendar event." To hear what's coming up, kids can simply say, "What's on my calendar for Sunday?"

The potential of home assistants is just emerging but it's clear that these devices will soon become an important tool for kids and adults to get extra support for learning. As always parental guidance and supervision is required.

School Smart

by Shelley M. Greggs, NCSP

Dear Readers, Kids with learning and attention issues need a great deal of support, sometimes more than a parent has the time and energy to give. Some recent research indicates that assistive technology (AT) may provide extra support at home for struggling students and their parents. Remember AT is generally defined as any device, piece of equipment or system that helps a person with around his/her challenges for better functioning. Jaime Martin, an assistive technology consultant, who specializes in finding AT solutions for students and adults with dyslexia, has identified numerous ways that a home assistant device, like the Amazon Echo or Google Home can make everyday tasks easier for kids who struggle with learning and attention.

Once you understand how these voice-activated and hands-free home assistant devices operate, you can ask them questions or give them commands to help with reading, writing, math and executive functioning skills. Here are some great tips from Mr. Martin.

Home assistants can help with spelling. When kids are writing, they can ask how to spell a word they have trouble with. If it's a word that has more than one spelling like deer vs. dear, it's a bit trickier, but kids can clarify which spelling they want. For example, they can say, "How do you spell the animal deer?"

Home assistants can give definitions and synonyms. Kids with reading issues can also ask home assistants for the meaning of words they don't recognize. Kids can ask for synonyms if they want to change words in their writing.

Home assistants can help sound out words. Kids who struggle with decoding can ask how to pronounce a word by spelling it out. With Google Home, they can say, "OK Google, how do you pronounce p-h-o-n-e?" With Amazon Echo, they can use a skill called Pronunciations and say, "Alexa, ask Pronunciations how to say r-o-u-g-h."

Home assistants can read books aloud. For hands-free listening to books, Amazon Echo has two options. If you have an Audible account, your child can listen to

Strong Debut For Kids' STEM Book

A new STEM book titled Horoscopes: Reality or Trickery? by Kimberly Blaker debuted March 21. The 73-page book for kids ages 9 to 13 explores the development and history of astrology and the claims made by astrologers and proponents. The author addresses the arguments both for and against its validity and examines the scientific evidence, or rather, lack thereof, for the validity of horoscopes. Readers also discover the tricks astrologers use to write horoscopes that create the illusion horoscopes are valid forecasts or assessments of personality.

Blaker explains, "Horoscopes: Reality or Trickery? is designed to help kids better understand the scientific method and develop critical thinking skills." In the educational book, readers can do seven activities and experiments as they sleuth for the truth about astrology.

Michael Shermer, best-selling author and monthly columnist for Scientific American, says, "this delightful book by Kimberly Blaker is the perfect balance of education and entertainment on a particular topic (horoscopes and astrology)... How do we know what is true? Science is the best tool we have, and this wonderful book should be gifted to every parent, teacher

What makes this book particularly unique is that it provides kids the tools and information needed to decide for themselves whether astrology is real or just a hoax. "My objective is not to tell kids what to think, but rather show them how to think for themselves and come to logical conclusions," Blaker said.

James Alcock, professor of psychology at Glendon College, York University, said: "Pseudoscience often appeals because it is fascinating and exciting, but this book demonstrates that critical thinking about pseudoscience can be just as fascinating and exciting, while having the additional advantage of dealing with what is real."

The book has received additional endorsements by such celebrities as Harriet A. Hall, a retired family physician and Air Force surgeon and columnist (SkepDoc) for Skeptic magazine as well as psychologist Susan Blackmore, one of Britain's most renowned skeptics who's done extensive research on paranormal claims.

Horoscopes: Reality or Trickery? is available in hardcover ($19.95), paperback ($13.95), and ebook ($9.95) through most online book retailers including Amazon, Barnes & Noble, and Green Grove Press as well as many brick-and-mortar booksellers. Music, Moods And Moments

by Kay Casperson

It is always amazing to me how music helps me create the atmosphere that I desire, from moment to moment and day to day. Music has a power that can be utilized to fit into absolutely everything you do, and it will make all the noise of life go away in just a split second. I play music to get everyone going early in the morning, for motoring through my workout routine, plowing through the workday, and then for enjoying my preparation of the evening dinner routine.

There is a song or melody for absolutely everything we do that will inspire, motivate and lift our spirits as well as calm, relax and soothe our souls. I am such a huge fan of music that I can still sing almost every lyric of every song that I loved as I grew up. I remember enjoying everything from rock, disco, R&B to Christian, pop, jazz and country. All the various kinds of music have a place, and a time to enjoy and appreciate.

I still listen to large variety of music depending on what I am doing throughout the day, and how I want to set the mood. My family has grown to also love and appreciate the many various kinds of music, and they know which ones to turn on when we are all together, without me even having to ask.

I have a few suggestions for music that just might enhance your day and help you continue to live your most balanced and beautiful life.

Morning – Start your day out fresh with music that motivates and inspires

you. Contemporary Christian, gospel or pop music that has positive messages should keep you in good spirits and will ensure that you begin a new day with a smile, happiness and a great outlook.

Workout – In my opinion, there is nothing better to workout to than a blast from the past, but make sure it has an upbeat tempo to keep you moving fast and forward. I have many fun flashbacks from the '80s so I get a good jolt from that era, but I also love an upbeat tempo, so the teen and dance beats work well too. Of course, if you're winding down or doing yoga, you will need something motivating yet calming at the same time in order to focus on your routine.

Day time – I personally have to focus on so many different tasks at hand throughout the day so I tend to gravitate towards a very subtle tone of music with no lyrics, like spa, tranquility or soundscapes of various kinds. Even soft classical music can keep you focused, but the point is that when only instrumentals play in the background, my mind is clear to think and make major decisions without much conflict on words.

Evening – This is a time that I love to prepare dinner and wrap up my workday so my favorite music to play is a soft jazz that gives a bit of a fun festive feel yet quiet enough for all to enjoy a good conversation over.

Regardless of your age and your love of music, I know for sure that picking the right music for the right time will ensure that your moments and moods are everything you want them to be.

My affirmation for you this week is:

"I will appreciate all that music brings my moods and will make the best choices for the right moments in life."

Hospital Receives International Award

Cape Coral Hospital is the first facility in Southwest Florida to receive prestigious international recognition as a Designated Baby-Friendly birth facility from Baby-Friendly USA. Currently there are 493 active Baby-Friendly hospitals and birth centers in the United States, and more than 20,000 worldwide.

"The obstetrics team at Cape Coral Hospital has worked diligently to meet the challenges of attaining this recognition," said Scott Kashman, Lee Health chief acute care officer. "They have been the first in the state to complete each level, and now achieving the Baby-Friendly Hospital designation, setting an example for other hospitals. This is another example of following the Lee Health vision to be a national leader for the advancement of health and healing."

Baby-Friendly USA, Inc. is the U.S. authority for the implementation of the Baby-Friendly Hospital initiative ("BFHI"), a global program sponsored by the World Health Organization (WHO) and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). The initiative encourages and recognizes hospitals and birthing centers that offer an optimal level of care for breastfeeding mothers and their babies. Based on the Ten Steps to Successful Breastfeeding, this prestigious international award recognizes birth facilities that offer breastfeeding mothers the information, confidence and skills needed to successfully initiate and continue breastfeeding their babies.

"We want to support mothers and encourage them to maximize breastfeeding benefits by continuing for as long as possible. We are proud of the initiative the team has taken to support women in their decision to breastfeed," said Nancy Travis, RN, BSN, MS, nursing director, Women's Care Center at Cape Coral Hospital. The hospital delivers over 1,500 babies a year.

The Baby-Friendly Hospital project uses hospital policy as a strategy to reduce obesity and other chronic diseases by improving optimal infant feeding practices through implementing evidence-based maternity care. According to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), for women who intend to breastfeed, the hospital experience is critical, and to give infants the best start in achieving a healthy life, including reduced obesity, mothers must be supported immediately after birth to establish breastfeeding.

More mothers in Florida are choosing to breastfeed their newborns but few breastfeed long enough to gain the maximum benefits for both mother and infant. According to the CDC National Immunization Survey, 77 percent of mothers in Florida choose to breastfeed their babies but less than 13 percent continue to breastfeed exclusively to the recommended six months.

Studies published by the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ) indicate that hospitals practicing evidence-based maternity care, as outlined by the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) Ten Steps have more patients breastfeeding in the hospital with longer durations outside of the hospital.

The designation is maintained by continuing to practice the Ten Steps as demonstrated by quality processes, and successful completion of an onsite survey.*

Planned Giving Symposium Set For June 7

The Planned Giving Council (PGC) of Lee County will present the 2018 Planned Giving Symposium at Florida Southwestern State College on Thursday, June 7 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. The keynote speaker is dynamic international speaker and author Terry Axelrod, founder and CEO of Benevon, – Creating Sustainable Funding for Nonprofits.

Axelrod will provide a day's immersion into what it takes to build a sustainable individual giving program. She will share her time-tested, often counterintuitive learnings that have helped more than 5,000 nonprofit teams raise more than $1 billion collectively in unrestricted funding, capital and endowment. Attendees will learn what it takes to build a culture of engagement.

"The donors are truly out there—wanting to contribute," said Axelrod. "It's up to the organizations to connect them powerfully to their work and nurture that connection over time."

"Nonprofits want to know how to create lifelong donors. Terry Axelrod will explain how any nonprofit, regardless of size or mission can develop real relationships with individuals who are passionate about their program; and build a strong major gifts program," said Dotty St. Amand, president of The Planned Giving Council of Lee County. "This is an excellent opportunity for non-profit professionals, financial and legal professionals that work in philanthropy, board members, volunteers and community leaders to have an engaging day of education and networking."

For more than 40 years, Axelrod has worked in the non-profit field, including founding three nonprofit organizations in affordable housing. She realized early in her career that the only path to sustainable funding was to systematically connect donors to the mission of the organization, then involve and cultivate them until they were clearly ready to give – in short, to treat donors the way you would treat a close friend or family member, someone with whom you planned to have a lifelong relationship.

Axelrod created the Benevon Model in 1996 after serving as development consultant to a private inner city school from 1992 to 1995. There she designed and implemented the fundraising and marketing programs that yielded $7.2 million in two and a half years as well as national recognition of the program including a cover story in The Chronicle of Philanthropy.

Author of eight books and several DVDs, she is a sought-after speaker, both nationally and internationally. Her passion and commitment to the possibility of sustainable funding for all nonprofits drive the mission of Benevon and each of its programs.

Don't Ignore Bloating, May Be Ovarian Cancer

by Suzy Cohen, RPh

Dear Readers: Cancer, named by Hippocrates as "karkinos," actually refers to a giant red crab in Greek mythology. Eating crab legs (something I haven't done in years) will never be the same now that you know this useless fact but anyway... cancer means that there is uncontrolled cell growth in a tissue, and it's termed "proliferation."

Cancer strikes fear into the heart of millions of people each year. Once diagnosed, people are often motivated to alter the number of chemicals in their life, change their diet and lifestyle and sometimes end toxic relationships.

Hindsight 20/20 occurs, like with my dear brother Danny, who had chronic low back pain and dismissed it. Sadly, it was one of several plaguing symptoms that was connected to colon cancer and he realized this after his diagnosis. "My brother was a secret," and he really was. If you'd like to read more about us, our relationship and his ultimate passing go to my website and search that phrase. Momentarily, I am going to tell you about a common symptom that you might have which could be tied to ovarian cancer.

No one is immune from hearing the word if they live long enough, especially in a day and age where environmental and food pollutants abound. And then there's cosmetic ingredients as well, such as talc. There was a woman who passed away from ovarian cancer in 2015, and her family was awarded $72 million dollars as a result of this talcum powder lawsuit.

New clinical trials and scientific articles have been popping up over the past year about medications and their benefit to ovarian cancer. For example, the medication class of statins (used for cholesterol management) have been investigated for their chemoprotective role, which is good. And recently, a study cleared metformin concluding that it does not raise risk for ovarian cancer, which is also good.

Here's more interesting news. You might be able to detect it sooner if you don't ignore this common symptom. Bloating. The bloating is not the typical kind of bloating that you might get now and then with your menstrual cycle, or after eating beans. The type of bloating is chronic. Additionally, other signs and symptoms of ovarian cancer include pelvic pain, frequent urination, quick satiety, feeling queasy and chronic fatigue.

There are six natural remedies that I'd like to share with you today. I will list them all here for you, so you can research on your own. If by chance, you want me to elaborate on the benefits of all of these, please sign up for my free newsletter at www.suzycohen.com, and I'll email you a longer version of this article that contains that information. In no particular order, here are the six holistic options to consider for healthy reproductive structure and function:

1. Medicinal mushrooms
2. Chia and Flax seeds
3. Turmeric
4. Resveratrol
5. Green Tea Extract
6. Iodine

If you're struggling with ovarian problems, do personal research because new compelling treatments, natural remedies and anti-cancer therapies are constantly being evaluated and released. There is always hope.

There are several ways that Florida residents and visitors can help bats:

Preserve natural roost sites, including trees with cavities and peeling bark. Dead fronds left on palms can also provide roosting spots for bats.

Put up a bat house.

Report unusual bat behavior to: www.myfwc.com/batmortality.

Bats can carry rabies. Although infected bats may not become aggressive, like any other wild animal, they can bite to defend themselves if handled. Don't touch or go near any wild animal, especially one that's not acting normally. For more information about rabies, visit the Florida Department of Health website at www.floridahealth.gov.

FWC staff are working to learn more and share information about Florida's bats. For more information on Florida's bats, visit www.myfwc.com/bat. If you need assistance, contact your closest FWC Regional Office to speak with a regional wildlife assistance biologist for more information.✧

Exercise And Brain Function

by Ross Hauser, MD
and Marion Hauser, MS, RD

We already know that exercise is great for our bodies, but scientific evidence continues to confirm that exercise also strengthens the brain. Moderate exercise nourishes the brain, improves our ability to learn, boosts mental performance, remodels the brain and helps prevent the brain from aging.

Scientists used to think the adult brain structure was fixed, and no new cells could be made or the brain altered in any way after adolescence. However, physical activity boosts blood flow all through the body, including the brain, which increases the ability of brain cells to connect with each other. Increased connectivity can occur by simply walking. More vigorous exercise, such as running, leads to faster reaction times and improved learning. Physical activity has been linked to a lower risk of the development of cognitive decline, because it is, in essence, a fertilizer for the brain, nourishing it and improving attention, memory and information processing.

A March 2018 article from Mayo Clinic Proceedings, researched all PubMed literature from 2017 regarding exercise and Parkinson's disease, as well as exercise and cognition. The literature showed a direct benefit of exercise on the brain. Dementia is the most feared aspect of Parkinson's, but adults who engage in exercise during midlife, are able to significantly reduce the risks of dementia and cognitive impairment later in life.

Exercise reshapes the brain. When we don't use our muscles, they atrophy. The brain is no different. Boost the health of brain cells, stimulate the growth of new blood vessels in the brain and encourage new neuronal connections through exercise.

Start your day with exercise. Exercising in the morning prepares you for the day by enhancing brain activity, improving information retention and fine-tuning your ability to react to the situations and stressors that come your way.

Bat Season

the maternity season.

Exclusion guidelines on how to remove bats from buildings can be found at www.myfwc.com/bats. Materials and methods to exclude bats can affect the success of that process. For more information on how to conduct a bat exclusion, watch the YouTube video: How to Get Bats Out of a Building. Further details on how to conduct a legal bat exclusion can be found at Bat Conservation International.

Bats are beneficial to people and are an important part of the ecosystem. The state's native bats help keep insect populations under control, with the average bat eating hundreds of insects a night. In addition to the benefit of keeping mosquitoes and other insects at bay for residents appreciating the outdoors, the value of insect suppression by bats to U.S. agriculture has been estimated to be in the billions of dollars.

Hello, my name is Penny. I am a 1-year-old female hound mix who has a curious nature and loves to run around and play. If you have an active lifestyle, I will fit into it perfectly. I am currently starting my obedience training with our volunteers, and my new family can continue my classes at ABC 4 K9 at 18481 North Tamiami Trail in North Fort Myers.

My adoption fee is $75, Spin the wheel for a $5 to $25 discount.

Hi, I'm Scooter. I am a 4-year-old male pit bull who is your typical 'big lug' kind of guy. I like to think I am a lap dog and will definitely try to get all four paws completely in your lap at one time. I like to go for walks and play with tennis balls in the yard. I would be great for a family with older kids.

My adoption fee is $75. Spin the wheel for a $5 to $25 discount.

ARC is located at 18011 Old Bayshore Road in North Fort Myers. For more information, visit www.animalrefugecenter.com.

The Brighter Beginnings Adoption Center was built thanks to the generous donations of the Animal Refuge Center's many sponsors.
