A Touching Drama At New Phoenix Theatre

by Di Saggau

There's a new theater in town, and that's exciting news for all thespians. New Phoenix Theatre opened its doors January 10 with Marvin's Room by Scott McPherson. You may remember the 1996 movie with Meryl Streep, Leonardo DiCaprio, Diane Keaton and others. The play is based on McPherson's experiences with older relatives who lived in Florida. He actually wrote the play while watching his partner battle AIDS.

It's a tender story about two long-estranged sisters who reunite after one is diagnosed with leukemia. Bessie (Stacy Stauffer) cares for her dying father Marvin who we do not see, but sometimes hear. She also looks after her elderly Aunt Ruth (Nancy Antonio). When learning that she needs a bone marrow transplant, Bessie reaches out to her sister Lee (Robin Murray) who lives in Ohio, a single mother with two sons, one of whom recently set fire to their home and is in a mental institution. The play opens with Bessie receiving the bad news from her bumbling doctor Wally (Kenneth Cosmo Ruisi). He can't remember anyone's name. He refers to Bessie as June, which is his dog's name.

match for a bone marrow transplant.

In spite of the seriousness of the play, it also has a great deal of smart humor. When Bessie passes out on a trip to Disney World, she's taken to a nearby bed by someone dressed up as Goofy. Aunt Ruth wears an electronic medical device around her waist that triggers the automatic garage door whenever someone hugs her. All the actors do a good job of balancing comic touches with realistic ones.

Bessie is the soul of Marvin's Room. She's selfless and efficient, and thankful that she has been caring for her father and her aunt. She says, "I've had such love in my life." That line really makes one think. Others with smaller roles in the play are Patricia Clopton as Dr. Charlotte, Cindi Heimberg, a nursing home administrator, and William Allenfort as Marvin.

The play is directed by James Robinson, who keeps his actors on task. Marvin's Room plays through January 27 at New Phoenix Theatre, located at 13211 McGregor Boulevard in Fort Myers. Tickets are available online at www.newphoenixtheatrefortmyers.org or by calling 284-5214. Next up is La Cage aux Folles, opening March 7.*

Fort Myers Coconuts Go To Pittsburgh

by Gerri Reaves, PhD

One thing about the Fort Myers Lions Club – it sure had its share of imaginative ideas over the decades, whether it was to raise funds for good causes or promote Fort Myers.

Few could top the coconut public-relations stunt of August and September 1954. Some people aptly called it just plain “nutty.”

The goal was to collect 10,000 – yes, 10,000! – coconuts and deliver them to Forbes Field in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. They would be distributed to fans at the team’s opening game against the Brooklyn Dodgers on September 19, Fort Myers Coconut Day.

Why the crazy stunt? Ostensibly, it showed of appreciation and kinship with the Major League baseball team, the Pittsburgh Pirates, who were to start their first spring-training season in Fort Myers at Terry Park early in 1955. (They would continue there through 1968.)

By extension, the Lions would reach the citizens of Pittsburgh, who were potential tourists.

It was a bonus that the stunt was designed around a local “prop,” the coconut, which would call attention to beautiful tropical Fort Myers and cost nothing to collect, for they grew all over town and in many backyards.

Boys from way out in Tice were among the many who did their part. They formed a bicycle-and-wagon convoy down Palm Beach Boulevard and delivered 73 coconuts to Terry Park.

Mr. and Mrs. IB King of Pine Island donated 10,000 to 12,000 just because the Lions sent a truck to get them.

The young women pictured here, all students or recent graduates of Fort Myers High School, also joined in the collecting.

The State Advertising Commission took the photos as part of the publicity. The location is the U.S. Post Office on First Street (today the Sidney & Berne Davis Art Center).

The 1954 photo to the right captures the fine art of collecting coconuts with the aid of a fire truck and ladder.

Others figuring prominently in the stunt, which was covered on the front page of The News-Press for weeks, were Lions president Harry Schooley; Herman Gluckman, chair of the Collection Committee; Edison Estate manager Bob Halgrim; and Chamber of Commerce manager Alan J. Robertson.

One practical aspect of the project was placing a label on each coconut that served as a local merchant’s personal invitation to visit Fort Myers during the winter season and stay for the spring training season.

Business owners paid 25 cents to sponsor each label, and the funds covered expenses for the trip.

Each label also had a number to be used in drawings for big prizes such as a week’s vacation in Fort Myers. As was customary, the Pirates also planned to give out major prizes, such as an automobile, to winners at the game.

As coconut collection progressed in Fort Myers, Pittsburgh was conducting its own publicity blitz, including television and newspaper coverage. Schooley estimated that

Gulfshore Opera Festival Opens On Sanibel

The Gulfshore Opera touring opera festival hits the road with GO Cabaret at The Community House on Sanibel on Sunday, January 20. This fun and casual evening of nostalgic hits from the 1930s to 1960s highlights the work of America's great song writers: George Gershwin, Jerome Kern, Cole Porter and Richard Rogers. The fusion of classically trained voices and professional jazz musicians creates a unique sound sensation that is sure to delight and inspire the audience to want to come back for more.

Don Pasquale follows on Sunday, February 10 at Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ on Sanibel. It is a comic opera about a stuffy old rich guy whose only heir is his rather deadbeat nephew. He threatens to disinherit his nephew for trying to marry an "unsuitable." Pasquale then decides to find a proper wife for himself and produce his own heirs.

The translations of the Italian text will be projected.

The Gulfshore Opera Professional Artists in Residence performing in these concerts include:

Returning Soprano Camille Ortiz, back from her summer European concert tour. She appeared as Gilda in Rigoletto and Christine in The

Cast members of GO Cabaret

Phantom Gala with Gulfshore Opera last season. Making his Florida debut, tenor Peter Lake recently performed the title role in Faust at the Natchez Festival of Music. New to the region, baritone Paul La Rosa has performed in many of America's top opera companies, including Lyric Opera of Chicago, Los Angeles Opera, Houston Grand Opera and San Diego Opera. Mezzo soprano Lauryn Kay recently graduated from the University of Florida with a master's in vocal performance.

The title role in Don Pasquale will be performed by veteran Tony Dillon, a versatile artist whose repertoire ranges from the most dramatic to the highest comedy roles. Well known for his interpretation of Benoit and Alcindoro in La Boheme, Dillon has played these roles for Seattle Opera, Michigan Opera Theater, Austin Lyric Opera, Des Moines Metro Opera, Tulsa Opera and Kentucky Opera. Recent engagements include Bartolo in Il Barbiere di Siviglia with Indianapolis Opera, Benoit and Alcindoro in La Boheme with Tulsa Opera, and Don Magnifico in La Cenerentola with Orlando Opera. Multi-Dove Award Winner To Perform At Church Sunday

The smooth, rich sounds of multi-Dove Award winning and multi-Grammy nominated trio The Martins will be featured during a service at the First Assembly of God on Sunday, January 20 at 7 p.m.

The talented musical family, which includes siblings Judy, Jonathan and Joyce Martin from rural Hamburg, Arkansas, have collected countless radio hits with performances on stages at such prestigious locations as The Grand Ole Opry and The White House. During the 1990s, The Martins rose to national and international success, showcasing their distinctive harmonies before a vast array of audiences. Over the years the trio garnered eight Dove Awards from the Gospel Music Association, two Grammy nominations and multiple hit songs.

After nearly a decade of pursuing individual music careers, the trio reunited in 2010 and released their first new recording in 10 years, New Day, produced by Jay DeMarcus (Rascal Flatts).

In 2014, The Martins joined renown arranger Lari Goss and long-time friends and producers Michael English, David Phelps and Matthew Holt to record a new a cappella hymns project. The recording, titled A Cappella, was released in May 2014. The recording earned the group a Grammy nomination for Best Roots Gospel Album, as well as the Dove Award nomination for Inspirational Album of the Year from the Gospel Music Association.

Most recently, The Martins returned to the recording studio to produce their latest recording. Still Standing will be released in July under the Gaither Music Group label. These compositions, including the remake of their classic hit Wherever You Are reflect the latest chapters in the siblings journeys as they share messages of God's goodness and providential hand at work in every season of our lives.

The First Assembly of God is located at 4701 Summerlin Road in Fort Myers. For more information, call 936-6277 or visit www.famfm.com or www.martinsonline.com.

Storytelling Showcase Returns To The Alliance

The Elephant III, Stories You'll Never Forget, is coming to the Alliance for the Arts on Wednesday, January 30 from 7 to 9 p.m. The 3rd annual storytelling showcase returns with 10 tellers and all new stories.

The Elephant was inspired by The Moth, a storytelling organization based in New York City. The Moth was founded in 1997 by George Dawes Green to recreate the feel of his childhood in Georgia, where stories were told on the front porch. He longed for the feeling of community that came from swapping personal stories. He called the organization The Moth because "People are attracted to a story the way a moth is attracted to a flame." Now, 21 years later, this storytelling organization produces live shows in nearly 30 cities, including Los Angeles, Chicago, New York, Detroit, Miami, London and Melbourne, Australia. It has had overwhelming success. There are Moths all over the world - in Kazakhstan, Edinboro, Perth - to standing-room-only crowds. It can be heard on NPR (National Public Radio) every Saturday night at 6 p.m. It has inspired numerous emulators who cater to their local communities.

Among the emulators are the Storytellers of the Round Table, who have named their productions The Elephant because these events have stories you'll never forget. The Elephant differs from The Moth in another respect as well - stories are not limited to personal stories. They can be traditional (folk tales), historical and literary as well as personal.

Master of ceremonies will be Dr. Joel Ying. Performances, in order of appearance, include Truth and Story, a medieval fable updated for a 21st century audience told by Mary Lou Williams; The Wide Mouth Frog, a humorous folk tale told by Tashahara Jallad; The Tiger's Whisker, a touching folk tale told by Rhonda Brazina; Yellow Butterflies, a personal story told by Leonor Reales about her life growing up with 15 siblings; The Legacy of Love, another personal story that is also historical as well because it takes place during the civil rights era, told by Dr. Joel Ying; Some Frog, a tall tale that Lisa Leonhardt almost convinces to be true; Blame It On Homesickness, a true story that Tony Marr almost convinces to be a tall tale; Running Out of Gas, a personal story about an unforgettable character told by Marilyn Graham; The Last Tango, told by Pamela Minton with an ending you don't see coming; The Fiery Retiree, told by Phyllis May, who won a Toastmaster award for humor with this piece. The stories are as intriguing as their titles.

Tickets are $15 for members and $20 for non-members.

Alliance for the Arts is located at 10091 McGregor Boulevard in Fort Myers. For more information and tickets, call 939-2787 or visit www.artinlee.org.

Historic Downtown

the stunt would give Fort Myers the equivalent of $250,000 dollars in publicity.

The nine-person delegation that flew to Pittsburgh from Tampa included Mayor Heard Edwards, who would present the key to the City of Fort Myers to the mayor of Pittsburgh; Lions Club members; as well as a "bevy of beautiful girls" to hand out coconuts at the stadium.

Queen of Edisonia Mary Louise Simpson (Carroll), Betty Prather and Doris Swank were chaperoned by Mrs. Frank Carson.

The coconuts traveled in two semis with signs reading "Pirates Coconut Caravan" and "Fort Myers, Home of the Spring Pirates."

Once there, the "ambassadors" were treated royally. The mayor and three "beauties" made a widely viewed television appearance in which they promoted Fort Myers. The visit wrapped up with a dinner party thrown by Pirates general manager Branch Rickey.

As for the coconuts, they caused such chaos when dumped on the field that the Pirates requested "no coconuts" in future.

Walk down to the former U.S. Post Office and imagine the scene in 1954 when the city went nuts for coconuts.

Then visit the following two research centers to learn more about other outlandish publicity stunts that make local history more interesting.

Theater Artist Wins Broadway World Awards

by Tom Hall

Multi-faceted musical theater artist Amy Marie McCleary recently won two of Broadway World's top awards for last season – Best Actress in a Musical (Professional) and Best Choreographer (Professional), both for Prather Entertainment's production of Chicago at Broadway Palm Dinner Theatre.

McCleary started in theater as a chorus girl. Since then, she has played some pretty prestigious roles: Velma Kelly in Chicago, Velma Von Tussle in Hairspray, Lexie in The Dixie Swim Club, Lola in Damn Yankees, Bombalurina in CATS, Gladys in The Pajama Game, Tiger Lily/Mrs. Darling in Peter Pan, Lily St. Regis in Annie and Sheila in A Chorus Line, to name a few.

Most Southwest Florida theater lovers know McCleary more through her work as Prather Entertainment Group's resident director/choreographer. In that capacity, she has staged more than 50 productions. She has directed numerous productions for the company, including Momma

Mia, Jesus Christ Superstar, Memphis, Hairspray, Grease, CATS, Sister Act, Irving Berlin's White Christmas, Peter Pan and Footloose, among others. As choreographer, McCleary has staged dances for Evita, Cabaret, The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas, All Shook Up, The King and I, Les Miserables, Annie, Dirty Rotten Scoundrels and the 2009-10 national tour of The Wedding Singer.

McCleary also helped create the musical revues Holly Jolly Christmas and A Swinging Christmas – creating a Fosse version of The Nutcracker Suite and a tap ballet featuring all nine of Santa's reindeer.

McCleary's directorial style reflects her passion for creating the world first and giving each actor equal attention as a facet of the story. She brings fresh and original ideas to every production in which she becomes involved. "I'm very much about focus and finding the role each actor plays within the world," McCleary explained.

When directing, McCleary feels as though she has a part in all the roles, and is able to affect the picture at large. There's a stronger sense of being able to work with individuals and help them grow in their paths as performers. Her positive energy, passion for theater, collaborative style, inventive direction and unequalled organizational skills create wonderful environments for actors to play and discover.

"I am 'an actor's director' and have a knack at creating a great ensemble connection that spreads from the rehearsal room onto the stage," she said.

McCleary's movement style is always character-based and works to propel the storyline forward with special attention to time period and the confines of the world being created.

"I love stepping out of the box with style and vision," she expounded. "My individual dance style combines a love of ballet, Fosse and contemporary street. I'm equally at home with a romantic pas de deux in the The Music Man or the poppy hip hop of High School Musical. And a good old-fashioned Weimer era club scene makes me weak at the knees."

"Working with Amy is like a breath of fresh air in this business," said Katherine Walker-Hill, who played Betty Haynes in Irving Berlin's White Christmas. "Not only is she well-prepared, she is also interested in creating a truly beautiful piece of art. She works well with all ages, talent levels and backgrounds; but she also pushes each and every performer to be the best they can be in a nurturing, yet professional setting. She has raised the bar for all directors and choreographers, which is a gift to the theatre community."

McCleary has a passion for education through the arts. "I'm a champion of education and thrive on working with young professionals," she stated. "And as a working mother, I'm a self-proclaimed feminist who encourages tenacity and leadership in the young women I have the honor of working with on a daily basis. I hope my legacy is to encourage and enlighten other artists in the best way possible – through excellent work that has vision and heart."

In 2015, McCleary created the Musical Theatre Intensive Arts Summer Camp in partnership with the Alliance for the Arts. The camp works with students on music theory, performance skills, dance, acting, collaboration and improv. In partnership with the Broadway Palm, campers are provided with the opportunity to work with professional actors on their skills in an environment which gives every student the chance to shine.

McCleary received her BFA with highest honors from NYU's Tisch School of the Arts, where she studied at CAP21, the premiere training ground for musical theater performers. She now makes her home in Southwest Florida. Her works in progress include a 4-year-old and a 2-year-old who love singing and dancing almost as much as their mom.

Tom Hall is both an amateur artist and aspiring novelist who writes art quest thrillers. He is in the final stages of completing his debut novel titled Art Detective. A former tax attorney, he lives in Estero with his fiancé and their four cats.*

The annual dinner is the main source of funding for the programs that the foundation sponsors. The nonprofit's mission is to offer programs that reach out to the young people in Southwest Florida, including the Summer Music & Arts Camps, Fifth Grade Traveling Instrument program, Double Reed & Music Festivals and High School Summer Music Camp scholarships. Each year, the foundation benefits more than 4,000 students with its programs and awards $10,000 to $15,000 each year to disadvantaged and deserving students.

Waddell is a local musical prodigy who started playing the piano at age 7. He has won numerous competitions and performed with the Southwest Florida Symphony and the Tampa Bay Symphony. He performs weekly at Lee Health's HealthPark Medical Center and has appeared on the nationally syndicated radio program From the Top with Christopher O'Riley. Waddell recorded his debut album at age 12.

Several of the award-winning high school scholarship students will perform at the showcase dinner. These include Grace Anderson, voice; Gus Bahruth, alto saxophone; Cassandra Cooper, cello; Carly Fulcher, cello; Jonathan Gardella, viola; Daniel Holmes, piano; Danyl Lawston, alto saxophone; Gwen Morris, oboe; and Victoria O'Donnell, violin.

This year, the foundation will also announce winners of the new Professional Development Program that supports local music teachers with continuing education opportunities.

Tickets are $50 each and can be purchased at www.music-foundation.org. For those unable to attend, tax deductible donations to support The Music Foundation of Southwest Florida can be given online.

Church Joins Health Challenge

In 2017, Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ (SCUCC) participated in the Million Mile Movement Challenge sponsored by Lee Health. The goal was for all of Lee County to get more active by moving one million miles in three months. Lee County, as a whole, fell slightly short of the goal, but SCUCC participants reached and surpassed the goal of 3,000 miles.

"By the end of the three months, we, as a team, had moved 7,317 miles," said Linda Covertine, parish nurse. "This year, I have signed us up again and have set a very ambitious goal of 10,000 miles."

Healthy Lee's Million Mile Movement is open to people of all ages and fitness levels. Any form of movement qualifies. Activities other than running and walking can be converted into miles by using the Activity Conversion Chart.

Convertine said, "In 2017, we converted all sorts of activities into miles. Aerobics, bicycling, dancing, gardening, swimming, tennis, golfing (with or without cart), bowling, elliptical, weight lifting, dog walking, Tai Chi, yoga, water aerobics, pickle ball, 'sittercize,' and even vacuuming can be converted into miles. If you are moving, it can be converted."

The challenge has begun and ends April 14. Convertine has made arrangements to have Lee Health list SCUCC as a team. She will assist anyone who would like help in registering or converting their various types of exercise into miles. She tells golfers who are on the SCUCC team, "If you golf regularly, just let me know how many holes you play each week and if you use a cart. I will keep a list and routinely enter your miles once a week unless notified otherwise."

Participants who want to track their own miles can sign up online as individuals, look for Sanibel Congregational UCC, and click on "Join the Challenge." Conversion charts for various forms of exercise will be available in Fellowship Hall at the church.

"The Million Mile Movement is a fun way to get moving and energize our bodies and our minds," said Covertine. "It's also a great opportunity to unify our community and church, working toward a common goal. Let's move into this new year by moving."

For more information, visit www.healthylee.com, or call the church office at 472-0497. Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ is located at 2050 Periwinkle Way and offers 7:45 a.m. chapel, 9 a.m. blended, and 11 a.m. traditional services on Sunday mornings.*

Auditions For Local Premiere Set For Saturday

Open auditions for The Legend of Georgia McBride will be held at The Laboratory Theater of Florida on Saturday, January 19 at 2 p.m.

The Legend of Georgia McBride is a funny, touching, heart-warming play about transformation and the joy of discovering our true selves. This play examines the life of Casey and his newly pregnant wife Jo as they struggle to make ends meet when careers and chosen paths are no longer working. A tribute to the world of drag, down-trodden Casey is thrust into the joyous and often bitchy world of drag queens where he finds a passion and exhilaration he has never experienced before. This newly discovered world ultimately leads Casey and Jo to deeper levels of understanding, happiness and love. The family Casey and Jo thought they were creating ends up being much more than they bargained for.

Characters needed include:

Casey – a good-looking country boy in his 20s. Needs to know how to play guitar and sing. Just a good-hearted guy in search of himself.

Jo – Casey's young good-looking wife. Script indicates that she is African-American. There needs to be a strong sexual energy between Jo and Casey. She is strong yet vulnerable.

Miss Tracy Mills – this character is the heart of the play. She needs to be a very polished drag performer who is in her 40s or 50s. Miss Tracey can have a bitchy edge to her, but mainly she is the grounding force of the entire play.

Eddie – A blue-collar guy who is a bit rough around the edges, but also has a kind and caring heart. This is a man who has had many drinks and many cigarettes. His world has been bars and honky-tonks.

Rehearsals will begin mid-April; the show will run from June 7 to 30.

Lab Theater is located at 1634 Woodford Avenue in Fort Myers. For more information, call 218-0481 or email laboratorytheaterflorida@gmail.com.*

CROW Case Of The Week:

Eastern Screech Owl

by Bob Petcher

An Eastern screech owl (Megascops asio) is known to be a master of disguise. The nocturnal owl blends well color-wise into its gray background in these parts. It is even hard to find when sleeping upright and pressed against a tree log opening. Its hidability is also aided by its color patterns that involve complex bands and spots to provide excellent camouflage against tree bark. In fact, this owl species is far more often heard than seen with its vibrating trilling sound.

The short, stocky bird has a large head and almost no neck. The tree-friendly bird is roughly the size of a pint glass and enjoys a wide range of food from earthworms, insects and lizards to mice, squirrels and rabbits to small birds and woodpeckers to bats and, more rarely, other owls. Eastern screech owls can store extra food in tree holes for as long as four days.

If you'd like an Eastern screech owl to take up residence in your backyard's natural setting, attach a nest box to a nearby tree. The structure should have a sloped roof, recessed floor and drainage floors in the floor of the box and proper ventilation holes in the walls.

At CROW, an adult Eastern screech owl was admitted from Labelle, when it was found along the side of the road. It was suspected to have been struck by a vehicle. As a result of the trauma, the owl suffered severe damage to its left eye. Just a couple days after being admitted, the eye showed no signs of improvement, and veterinarians involved with the case made the decision to remove or eviscerate the damaged eye.

"The luxation, or dislocation, of the lens meant that the eye could not be repaired," said Dr. Kyle Abbott, CROW veterinary intern. "The surgery was performed because this would be a source of chronic pain for this patient."

Since the surgery, the patient has reportedly been doing well. It was stated to have a great appetite and was recently moved to an outside enclosure where rehab staff is assessing its flight and hunting abilities before determining if it will be released.

"The assessment is generally a few weeks to assess the patient's flight and hunting prowess with only one eye," said Dr. Abbott. "This owl has shown that he can make flights and does well in an outside cage. The next step is to test this owl's ability to catch its own prey."

While one-eyed patients are less likely to be re-released into the wild, an owl has a better chance due to its hearing capabilities.

Patient #18-4724 needs to show it can catch its own prey before being released

"In general, we do not release raptors that have only one eye," added Dr. Abbott. "However, this is different in owls because they rely on hearing for much of their hunting. This is still controversial amongst wildlife rehabilitators, but the majority of centers will still release owls that have passed flight and hunting tests in captivity."

Sheepshead Fishing Great In Cold Water

by Capt. Matt Mitchell

Falling water temperatures and more cold fronts made for another week of nonstop sheepshead fishing. Some days locating these fish took more work than others, though after a few moves the daily result was the same with my clients smiling and a cooler of sheepshead heading to the fillet table.

Anywhere close to the passes was a good place to start the sheepshead rodeo. Docks, pilings, sea wall and blow downs or basically any place with moving current that has barnacles growing on it held these fish. Often the difference between catching them and not catching them was getting the boat positioned so you could present your bait right next to the structure. After getting the boat set up in the right position, an accurate cast is all that's required for game on.

Downsizing the tackle to 2500 series spinning reels on medium light rods rigged with 10-pound braid makes the larger sheepshead a real tussle.

This lighter tackle also makes for more accurate casting. I cannot stress enough how important it is to keep your bait close to the structure to be successful on these, what I refer to as finesse fish. The bite is often very light as they nibble at a bait, and knowing when to set the hook only comes with time spent. It's almost like you have to anticipate that the sheepshead is holding the bait to hook 'em.

Many of the places I'm catching the sheepshead are also giving up a few other species including redfish and black drum. During cold water times, chunks of shrimp fished on a quarter jig head has our catch all set up. Keep the bait on the bottom and don't move it as these fish feed by scent.

With each passing cold front, the average size of these fish continues to increase. With February and March, the prime months for this fishery will just keep getting better and better. It's amazing how this species of fish takes over our cold water months and becomes our main target species when it's just too cold for many other species to cooperate. With more cold fronts forecast over the next 10 days, our sheepshead fishing will only continue to get better.

Native eastern gamagrass is wildlife-friendly, low-maintenance groundcover – border or background photos by Gerri Reaves

Plant Smart Eastern Gamagrass

by Gerri Reaves

Eastern gamagrass (Tripsacum dactyloides) is a member of the grass family and closely related to maize.

Native to the eastern half of the U.S. and much of the Midwest, it is also called Fakahatchee grass.

In Florida, its natural habitat is wet areas such as swamps, marshes and wet pinelands and along riverbanks.

This clumping perennial grows as tall as six feet in a fountain-like form, so it adds height and volume to the landscape.

From spring to fall, terminal inflorescences bloom on tall arching stems that extend above the leaves.

The spikes have separate male and female flowers. The stigma, the female part of the flower, is purple or reddish brown, and the stamens, the male part of the flower that carries pollen, is orange.

The blooms dangle from the stalk like a line of wine-colored fringe moving in the breeze.

This species is a larval host for several native skipper species and provides cover for small wildlife. The small hard yellow one-seeded fruit is consumed by birds and deer.

In the warmer parts of the state, the grass is evergreen.

Use it as a groundcover, background, or border, or plant it beside a pond.

Alternate linear leaves are flat and have sharp-toothed edges, giving the species some value as a security border.

Its height makes it a good substitute for non-native pampas grass (Cortaderia selloana).

This grass also works well as a soil stabilizer on sloping ground.

Give it full sun to partial shade. It can grow in nutrient-poor soil, but must have some organic content to thrive.

It is pest-resistant, salt-tolerant and hardy, and has a moderate growth rate. While it prefers moist soil, it is somewhat drought-tolerant.

Cutting back or mowing is optional, so it's virtually maintenance-free.

Spikes of separate male and female flowers appear spring to fall. The female flowers are purplish or wine-colored.

Propagate it with the seeds or by dividing the clumps of fibrous roots.

Meetings About Flood-Mitigation Efforts Near

Lee County is planning three public meetings to inform stakeholders and residents about the yearlong effort the county has started for Phase 3 of its post-Hurricane Irma flood-mitigation efforts. The informational meetings will be formatted as a drop-in 4 to 6 p.m. on three consecutive Thursdays at various county locations.

- The meetings will be held:
 - January 24 at Wa-Ke Hatchee Recreation Center, 16760 Bass Road, Fort Myers
 - January 31 at the Bonita Springs Library, 26876 Pine Avenue, Bonita Springs
 - February 7 at Veterans Park Recreation Center, 55 Homestead Road South, Lehigh Acres
- County staff and engineering firms will be on hand to provide information about the study and the process. Staff will also introduce the public to the county's updated flood-mitigation project website – www.leegov.com/flooding – so residents can follow the process and obtain updates. More public meetings will be planned in 2019 before the study's conclusion.

This study and process – called Phase 3 – is being handled by local engineering firms and Lee County Natural Resources. The Lee Board of County Commissioners approved a contract for the firms, who were selected via a procurement process, to do a yearlong assessment with recommendations for the board in late 2019 looking at potential long-term flood-mitigation projects.

Completion of Phase 3 of the county's flood-mitigation effort is necessary before any long-term and large-scale infrastructure improvements can happen. Next steps could include an array of actions such as grant applications, land acquisition (if necessary), permitting, design, bid and construction. Projects would be subject to board approval and could include stakeholders such as municipalities and special districts.✧

Governor Issues Executive Order On Water Policy

On January 10, Gov. Ron DeSantis signed Executive Order 19-12, which reforms Florida's environmental and water policy. Called the Achieving More Now for Florida's Environment executive order, Governor DeSantis said:

"Our water and natural resources are the foundation of our economy and our way of life in Florida. The protection of water resources is one of the most pressing issues facing our state. That's why today I'm taking immediate action to combat the threats which have devastated our local economies and threatened the health of our communities."

The order has five major components: Appropriating $2.5 billion over the next four years to restore the Everglades and water protection.

The creation of the Blue-Green Algae Task Force which will work to reduce blue-green algae blooms over the next five years.

The South Florida Water Management District will start the next phase of Everglades Agricultural Area Storage Reservoir Project all according to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The creation of the Office of Environmental Accountability and Transparency which will organize scientific research so that all agency actions will be aligned with environmental policies.

The appointment of a Chief Science Officer which will organize, monitor, and collect scientific data to ensure communication between the agencies and Floridians regarding environmental issues.✧

Commercial Group Volunteers For Food Bank

Trinity Commercial Group employees volunteered for a United Way Day of Caring at Harry Chapin Food Bank's Mobile Pantry photo provided

Thirty volunteers from Trinity Commercial Group (TCG) participated in a three-part project United Way Day of Caring for Harry Chapin Food Bank. Volunteers were divided into three groups: preparing bags of food, packaging pinto beans and distributing food through the mobile food pantry.

"We loved having Trinity Commercial come and help us. It's amazing that they were able to staff two shifts sorting food plus a mobile pantry, all in one day. It shows how much a committed organization can accomplish," said Richard LeBer, president and CEO of Harry Chapin Food Bank of Southwest Florida.

In the food bank warehouse, one group prepared 240 bags of supplemental food for delivery to local seniors in need. Another group took 750 pounds of pinto beans in large bulk bags and repackaged them into family-size meal packages. The third group went to Franklin Park Elementary School to distribute nearly 4,000 pounds of food to families through the Harry Chapin Mobile Food Pantry program.

"Trinity Commercial Group would like to thank the United Way and the Harry Chapin Food Bank for the opportunity to participate in the Harry Chapin food packaging and mobile food bank mission. Our team had a wonderful time at this event and looks forward to many more. We are honored and humbled to be a small part of serving our communities through these fine non-profit agencies," said Doug Olson, principal managing director of Trinity Commercial Group.

"The work of the TCG employees who volunteer for a United Way Day of Caring, means a great deal to our United Way Partner Agencies such as Harry Chapin Food Bank. The gift of your time and effort helps stretch agency dollars, and has a significant impact on the lives of families in our community," said Cliff Smith, president of the United Way of Lee, Hendry, Glades, and Okeechobee.

The United Way's Day of Caring is a year-round program, coordinated by the United Way Volunteer Center which matches businesses' desires to help with the needs of the community. Many local groups and companies have participated such as Publix Super Markets, Lee County Tax Collector, Wells Fargo and Pavese Law Firm.

The United Way Volunteer Center connects individuals and companies to volunteer opportunities throughout our community.

The Tattooist Of Auschwitz

by Di Saggau

The Tattooist of Auschwitz is an unlikely love story set amid the horrors of a Nazi death camp. Based on real people and events, this debut novel from Heather Morris, takes place in 1942. Lale Sokolov, a 25-year-old Slovakian Jew, is forcibly transported to the concentration camps at Auschwitz-Birkenau. When his captors discover that he speaks several languages, he is assigned to the heinous task of tattooing incoming Jewish prisoners with the dehumanizing numbers their SS captors use to identify them. He is a Tätowierer tasked with permanently marking his fellow prisoners.

One day in July 1942, Lale, prisoner 32407, meets 17-year-old Gita, and he is immediately smitten. He carefully comforts the trembling young woman before tattooing the number 34902 on her arm. He later told Morris, "I tattooed her number on her left hand, and she tattooed her number in my heart." Eventually, the attraction becomes mutual, and Lale vows to somehow survive the camp and marry her.

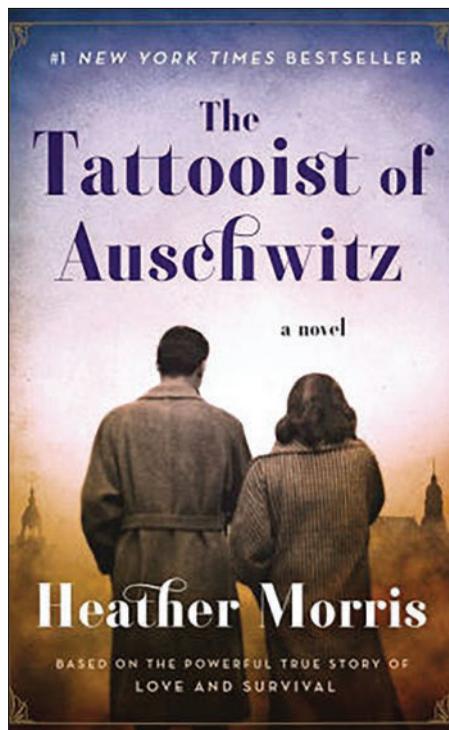

image provided

Imprisoned for more than two and a half years, Lale witnesses horrific atrocities and barbarism, but also incredible acts of bravery and compassion. Risking his own life, he uses his privileged position to exchange jewels and money from murdered Jews for food to keep his fellow prisoners alive. Morris explores some of the trickier issues, the guilt of those Jews, like the tattooist, who survived by doing the Nazis' bidding, and some of the Slovaks in Lale's hometown, who failed to come to the aid of their beleaguered countrymen. With his knowledge of several European languages, he eavesdrops on conversations between SS guards, and befriends Russian prisoners of war.

Over time, a strange dynamic develops between Lale and SS officer Stefan Baretski. Known for his sadism and enthusiasm at selections on "the ramp," he was sentenced to life in prison at the 1963 Frankfurt Auschwitz trials. In the camp, he acts as a messenger between Lale and Gita. Lale also adds emotional support to many, including Leon, Lale's assistant who was castrated by Dr. Mengele, and 41-year-old Nadya, who is eventually sent to the gas chambers with the remaining Roma.

It took three years of thrice-weekly meetings between Lale and Morris for the author to gain the survivor's trust. The result is a vivid, harrowing and ultimately hopeful re-creation of Lale Sokolov's experiences during the Holocaust and his eventual reunion with Gita. The Tattooist of Auschwitz is a testament to the endurance of love and humanity under the darkest possible conditions.*

School Smart

by Shelley M. Greggs, NCSP

Dear Shelley, My second grade daughter is having a hard time following directions. She can't follow simple three step directions and she's struggling in school. Her hearing is fine, and she's able to pay attention so why can't she remember things better. What's going on?

Kayte, Fort Myers

Kayte,

Kids who have a hard time "staying on track" may be having problems with working memory. Remembering a phone number, recalling directions, or remembering an assignment are all mental tasks that use working memory. Working memory is an executive function that plays a major role in how we process, use and remember information on a daily basis. Everyone struggles with the limits of working memory sometimes, but for kids who struggle with working memory, it often presents a more significant problem.

Dr. Matthew Cruger, senior director of the Learning and Development Center at the Child Mind Institute defines working memory like this, "It's keeping in mind anything you need to keep in mind while you're doing something." While long-term memories stay with us even when we're not thinking of them, working memory is an active process, a mental chalk board where we hold and process all the information we need to access at any given time.

"Our brains have a finite capacity for juggling a lot of information at once," explained Linda Hecker, MEd, education specialist at Landmark College. Hecker says she helps her students understand the role of working memory by describing it as a table. When you have a lot of new information, it's easy to overload your "table" and things start falling off."

One of the challenges kids with working memory issues face, Dr. Cruger notes, is that their lapses can easily be misinterpreted as bad behavior. When they fail to follow a set of instructions, they appear to be unmotivated or even oppositional, which can lead to conflict and accusations of not trying hard enough. Kids hate having to admit that they can't remember things, he adds, and they tend to try to minimize the amount of effort they put into things that don't yield positive results. And the criticism they get in turn is a disincentive for them to expend the extra energy it takes for them to keep track of what's expected of them.

Here are some suggestions to help your child. Observe your child carefully and figure out when and how often she starts to lose the thread. It will help you get a clearer picture of your child's capacity to hold information. Once you know where her limits lie, you'll be able to use that as a guide for giving effective directions.

For example, if you notice your child has a hard time following multi-step directions, try breaking tasks down into smaller, more manageable steps. For example, try focusing on one task at a time: "We're getting ready to have dinner soon. It's time to put your toys away. When you're finished, let me know and I'll tell you what to do next."

Helping kids get into routines is essential for helping with working memory. "When we're able to automate a task, it no longer requires working memory to function," said Hecker. "Remembering what to do next takes up cognitive workspace — and that's not necessary."

Be consistent: Find a routine that works and stick with it.

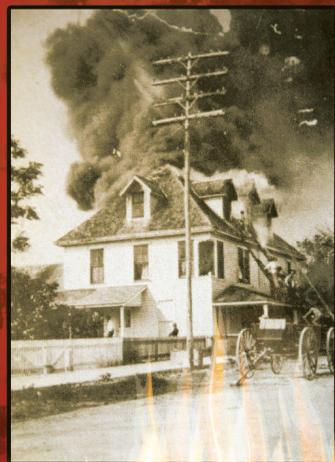

Be patient: Don't expect kids to get it right away, it takes time to build habits. Reminding and praising your child's efforts to stay on course will help her stick with the routine until it sinks in.

Use verbal and visual cues: Help kids internalize routines by adding verbal and visual backups.

Whether you're a long-time resident or a first-time visitor to Sanibel or Captiva, shells are probably on your mind. Your family delights in them at the beach. You might collect them to take home as souvenirs. Perhaps you've become one of our local shell experts!

AT THE BAILEY-MATTHEWS NATIONAL SHELL MUSEUM, WE KNOW THAT MOLLUSKS—THE MARVELOUS CREATURES THAT CREATE THE SHELLS—ARE AMAZING ANIMALS. THERE ARE MORE MOLLUSKS IN THE OCEAN THAN ALL THE FISH AND MARINE MAMMALS COMBINED. MOLLUSKS ARE A CRITICAL COMPONENT OF THE WORLD'S FOOD WEB—INCLUDING OUR OWN. MANY ARE ENDANGERED AND MOST PEOPLE DON'T KNOW THEY EXIST.

However, when people meet mollusks, they fall in love with them. It may start with a love and appreciation for their beautiful shells, then through the Museum's educational platforms; that love grows for the living creatures themselves—the shell creators.

There is no other community in the world that is doing this work. There is no other community in the world that is as invested in the health of these mollusks—and the ocean—as our island friends. That's why we started the Alive! campaign which will expand the Museum to include an innovative aquarium with all types of amazing mollusks, including octopus, cuttlefish, and squid.

One of the most gratifying aspects of the Alive! campaign is the enormous and broad participation we have already seen. We've already raised nearly 60% of our fundraising goal. We are thrilled to report that we're celebrating breaking ground. Construction will take about six months, with an additional six months for aquarium and exhibit design and installation. We are on track to open the aquarium in early 2020.

Based on our momentum, it's clear that the Museum's focus on mollusks and our natural environment is greatly inspiring others. There's real excitement: new people, new ideas, and new resources. It will transform the way we create informed and engaged environmental stewards. That's more important than ever. Great things will come of this!

We're grateful to our wonderful community for all that you have done to make Alive! an enormous success so far, and for all that you will do to help us meet remaining priorities in the coming months. You are helping the Bailey-Matthews National Shell Museum make a difference in our community, and around the world.

In the weeks that follow, look for the WHAT'S NOW WHAT'S NEXT column each week.

THIS IS YOUR MUSEUM AND WE WANT TO KEEP YOU UP-TO-DATE EVERY STEP OF THE WAY ALONG THIS JOURNEY!

THE NEW AQUARIUM: FAQ

WHY SANIBEL?

- Sanibel is the shelling capital of the world.
- Sanibel is the only place whose identity, laws, and people have made shells—and the animals that create them—part of the very fabric of our community. We led the world when we passed the first-ever live shelling ban in 1994 and we have been protecting these animals ever since.
- The world will look to Sanibel as the leader and expert in live mollusks. We will preserve, care for, breed, and share these animals with the world. The work is just beginning. So little is still known about these creatures.
- Sanibel's local mission is now global. We are reaching out to the world—opening the minds of museum visitors and beachgoers, and spreading a passion for shells to a love for the animals that create them and the ocean they live in.

HOW WILL MY FAMILY BENEFIT?

- Sanibel families will enjoy a mollusk aquarium unequalled anywhere else in the world.
- These animals will surprise, delight, and entertain family members of all ages while they learn our important lessons of environmental and animal stewardship.

MAKITANI (CC BY-NC-SA 2.0)

WHERE DO WE START?

- FIRST: We start here. People come to Sanibel because of our shells and "shell brand."
- AND: 9 out of 10 people don't know that a shell was part of a living animal.
- FACT: If you don't know a creature exists, you can't help to save it.

WHAT CAN WE DO?

- FIRST: Create a unique aquarium: the first mollusk menagerie.
- AND: The diversity of these animals from all over the world is beyond belief.
- AND: Enable people to "meet" mollusks eye-to-eye, nose-to-siphon.
- FACT: It's an emotional, life-changing experience.

HOW WILL IT MAKE A DIFFERENCE?

- FIRST: Once you've learned that an animal exists, you can't forget!
- AND: We will add educational programs to complete the experience.
- AND: We will connect people, mollusks, and ocean stewardship.
- FACT: To save something—even the world—you have to emotionally care about it. That's the change we will make every day, every visitor, every time.

WHAT IS THE MOST COMMON VISITOR COMMENT AFTER A MUSEUM VISIT?

"WOW, I will never look at the beach in the same way again. You've opened up a whole new world for me."

WILL THIS BE GOOD FOR OUR ENVIRONMENT?

Yes. The Museum's vision is to connect people to the natural world around them. Our residents and visitors are more connected to shells than are people anywhere else in the world—by extending that connection to shells AND the living animals, we change perceptions of our natural world.

WILL THIS BE GOOD FOR KIDS?

Yes! The aquarium will educate, delight, inspire, and thrill kids of all ages. And, the revenue generated by the addition of the aquarium will enable the Museum to take our mobile educational programs to more schools throughout Lee County.

HOODED CUTTLERISH BY SILKE BARON (CC BY 2.0)

WILL THE MUSEUM EXPAND OR REQUIRE MORE LAND?

No. All improvements will be within the existing developed area. The Museum's footprint will remain the same.

WILL THE MUSEUM HAVE TO BE CLOSED DURING CONSTRUCTION?

We will have to be closed for a couple of weeks, but we expect to be operational during most of the construction phase.

WHAT WILL HAPPEN IN A HURRICANE OR BAD WEATHER?

The building improvements will be built to current hurricane standards. The aquarium will have a generator for animal life support in the event of a power failure.

HOW WILL WE AFFORD IT?

The Museum is raising funds for the project. Once operational, the new facilities pay for themselves and can be used to underwrite programs.

HOW CAN I HELP?

Call Executive Director, Dorrie Hipschman or Assistant Director, Melanie Moraga at 239-395-2233.

WILL THIS BE GOOD FOR OUR ECONOMY?

Yes. The Museum has a $1.6 million annual budget. We employ more than 20 people and spend about $1.3 million in our local economy. The addition of the aquarium will sustain this, benefiting our community.

WILL THE PROJECT BRING MORE VISITORS TO SANIBEL?

The Museum does no off-island advertising. We encourage people who are already on the island to learn more about our wonderful sanctuary island and the need to preserve its wildlife, waters, and beaches.

WILL THE PROJECT CAUSE MORE TRAFFIC?

The Museum does not bring traffic to the island, and we persuade visitors to get off the road and spend several hours in the Museum. Even on our busiest days, we have plenty of parking.

"We have the opportunity before us to transform the way we teach residents and visitors about the ocean and our local habitat. Caring for the environment is important for each and every one of us. The aquarium addition will help us inspire the next wave of ocean leaders!"

—Chris Davison, Campaign Cabinet Member and Board Past President

"Most people do not know mollusks are the creators of the beautiful shells found on our beaches. Exhibits can go a long way to educate, but seeing live animals in the Museum's aquarium will solidify the importance of these amazing creatures."

—Richard Johnson, Campaign Cabinet Chair

"The aquarium expansion will improve the Museum's opportunity to connect children with the natural world through their love of seashells. It will help bring the Museum's mission to life!"

Accent Prone

by Trinette Nelson

So, what is “accent furniture,” and what can it mean in your home décor?

Clearly, accent furniture suffers from an identity crisis as it is frequently lumped into the “occasional furniture” category. But accent is not occasional – never has been, never will be.

Accent furniture celebrates individualism. It doesn’t want to match and is contemptuous of hanging about in sets or suites of furniture. It stands apart, not in pairs. This individualistic trait distinguishes accent from occasional furniture, which is designed to blend in and match. Occasional is typically plural, as in two end tables, a cocktail table and a sofa table that match or a suite of bedroom furniture, all detailed and finished exactly alike. Accent pieces exist to break up this monotony by adding that hot spot where there is none.

When carefully selected, the perfect piece can create bright and interesting spots in every room of the home. The category includes chests, tables, benches, chairs, console cabinets, secretaries, wine (social) cabinets, headboards and etageres.

Accent furniture commands attention and usually is the focal point in any room. Often colorful, these pieces can be hand-painted or crafted from exotic woods, fossil stones, sea grasses, various metals, hammered copper, glass, acrylic, driftwood, tiles, animal skins, or reclaimed woods. At last fall’s International Home Furnishings Market in High Point, North Carolina, we saw many accent tables upholstered in fabrics, leathers and shark skin. Most every furniture showroom we visited offered an extensive array of accent pieces – unique, fun and functional.

If there are rooms in our homes that haven’t changed in years, that still function well but don’t excite, maybe it’s time for a fabulous accent piece to liven things up a bit. Become prone to accents.

Which 401(k) Plan Is Right For You?

by Jennifer Basey

For many years, employees of companies that offered 401(k) plans only faced a couple of key decisions – how much to contribute and how to allocate their dollars among the various investment options in their plan. But in recent years, a third choice has emerged: the traditional versus Roth 401(k). Which is right for you?

To begin with, you need to understand the key difference between the two types of 401(k) plans. When you invest in a traditional 401(k), you put in pre-tax dollars, so the more you contribute, the lower your taxable income. Your contributions and earnings grow tax-deferred until you begin taking withdrawals, which will be taxed at your ordinary tax rate. With a Roth 401(k), the situation is essentially reversed. You contribute after-tax dollars, so you won’t lower your taxable income, but withdrawals of contributions and earnings are tax-free at age 59 ½, as long as you’ve held the account at least five years.

So, now that you’ve got the basics of the two types of 401(k) plans, which should you choose? There’s no one right answer for everyone. You essentially need to ask yourself these questions: When do you want to pay taxes? And what will your tax rate be in the future?

If you’re just starting out in your career, and you’re in a relatively low income tax bracket, but you think you might be in a higher one when you retire, you might want to consider the Roth 401(k). You’ll be paying taxes now on the money you earn and contribute to your Roth account, but you’ll avoid being taxed at the higher rate when you start taking withdrawals. Conversely, if you think your tax rate will be lower when you retire, you might be more inclined to go with the traditional 401(k), which allows you to avoid paying taxes on your contributions now, when your tax rate is high.

Of course, you can see the obvious problem with these choices – specifically, how can you know with any certainty if your tax bracket will be lower or higher when you retire? Many people automatically assume that once they stop working, their tax liabilities will drop, but that’s not always the case. Given their sources of retirement income from investment accounts and Social Security, many people see no drop in their tax bracket once they retire.

Since you can’t see into the future, your best move might be to split the difference, so to speak. Although not all businesses offer the Roth 401(k) option, many of those that do will allow employees to divide their contributions between the Roth and traditional accounts. If you chose this route, you could enjoy the benefits of both, but you still can’t exceed the total annual 401(k) contribution limit, which for 2019 is $19,000, or $25,000 if you’re age 50 or older.

You may want to consult with your tax advisor before making any decisions about a Roth or traditional 401(k) – or Roth and traditional 401(k) – but in the final analysis, these are positive choices to make, because a 401(k), in whatever form, is a great way to save for retirement. Try to take full advantage of it.

Collaboratory

ACL Railroad Depot in downtown Fort Myers.

“I wrote the play specifically for this historical location,” said Brock. “And it’s also influenced by the mission of the foundation, as it celebrates community and inclusivity.”

As with other Ghostbird productions, this play involves original music, songs, dance, soundscape and spoken word. “We designed the play to take place outside the Collaboratory,” said director Barry Cavin, “where the original depot remains intact. We want to use as much of the old station as possible, and then fill it with light and sound and movement.”

Two newcomers to Ghostbird are taking lead roles. Sharon Isern will play Mother, the Chechen refugee, and Josh Needle plays Sam, the luckless commuter. “What’s cool in the play,” said Needle, “is that Mother and Sam never meet, but their lives are connected.”

For Isern, an FGCU professor of biology, this is her stage debut. “I’m more than out of my comfort zone,” said Isern, “but we have only one life to experience what we can. I love it that the play is also about that simple message.”

The cast also includes past Ghostbird performers Dan De La Rosa, Katelyn Gravel, Scott Michael, Kaleena Rivera, Megan Shindler and Terry Tincher. Victor Ballo and Philip Heubeck composed original music, and dancer Olivia Curtalo will have featured performances.

Tickets are $20 per adult and $10 per student. The run time of the show is under 90 minutes. The play is not suitable for children.

Big Brothers Big Sisters Celebrate Mentoring Month

Longstanding studies show long-term, one-to-one, staff-supported volunteer mentoring works. During National Mentoring Month this January, Big Brothers Big Sisters of the Sun Coast is honoring all who make up their successful community – parents, volunteers, staffers and donors who work together – to make a mentoring match strong, enduring and successful.

Behind every successful mentoring match is a team of selfless, dedicated believers. Of course, there's the volunteers who makes time in their schedule to commit to helping a child reach their full potential. There's the parent or guardian, most often a single mom or grandmother who courageously seeks support to give her child every opportunity to succeed. Then there's the staff person, a professional who uses facts from interviews, references, experience and intuition to match the right child and family with the right volunteer. And behind every relationship are the donors, whose financial resources make it possible for our mentors, mentees and parents to get the ongoing support, guidance and resources that help them establish and maintain the kind of dialogue, communication and understanding that are behind Big Brothers Big Sisters' successful long-term one-to-one mentoring relationships.

This month, volunteers are being honored for being Defenders of Potential. Parents and guardians are being thanked for their trust and commitment to their children as are Big Brothers Big Sisters staff and donors.

"In my 32 years I've encountered a lot of youth who are kind of lost and who are really good kids. They are looking for someone to spend some time with them. And not a lot of time.

Just a little bit of time. The value that it brings to that youth, I believe keeps them from encountering people like me and encountering my deputies. I believe the value of Big Brothers Big Sisters is much larger than anybody would ever recognize or know – purely for the fact that the youth coming out of the program usually go on to bigger endeavors in their life. It humbles you, and makes you realize the little bit of time your spending with the young man is leaving an impact," said Big Brother and Sarasota County Sheriff Tom Knight.

Sheriff Knight's Little Brother Matthew Roig says this about his Big Brother. "Before I met Tom, I didn't get out very much. He's definitely opened up a lot more opportunities for me. You know, just to be more outgoing in life, it has definitely changed me for the better. I know that we're going to be friends for a long time."

For over 50 years, Big Brothers Big Sisters of the Sun Coast has been matching youth in meaningful, enduring, professionally supported mentoring relationships with adult volunteers who defend their potential and help them achieve their biggest possible futures. Big Brothers Big Sisters' evidence-based approach is designed to create positive youth outcomes, including educational success, avoidance of risky behaviors, higher aspirations, greater confidence and improved relationships. This past year, Big Brothers Big Sisters of the Sun Coast has served over 1,800 youth across a 10 county footprint. Learn how to get involved at www.bbbsun.org.

Will Power

Pay On Death Account Fail

by Craig R. Hersch, Florida Bar Board Certified Wills, Trusts & Estates Attorney; CPA

Not to disparage bank employees, but many of my clients have been told by tellers, managers and other bankers to designate their accounts as “Pay on Death” to their beneficiaries rather than spending the money to create a revocable living trust. While a Pay on Death (“POD”) account will generally avoid the probate process, those accounts are not ideal for those with any degree of net worth.

PODs may name a single or multiple parties, but a beneficiary is not the same as an account signatory. A beneficiary is the person named as one to whom sums on deposit in an account are payable on request after the death of the account holder. Generally speaking, if the account owner becomes incapacitated, the POD beneficiaries may not access the account funds for the account owner’s benefit.

In which case, the account owner should have a validly drawn, current durable power of attorney that would specifically enable the agent named in that document to handle pay on death accounts. Absent such a document, the account funds may not be accessed. The family’s choice would then be to head to guardianship court, which takes time and is expensive.

Further, the financial institution’s responsibility is to pay the account to the beneficiaries upon demand at the account owner’s death. If the account owner has a surviving spouse who would have rights to the account either as someone who contributed amounts to it, or under state law under a spousal elective share interest, then that controversy could very well end up in litigation.

The account may suffer if one of the owners is sued, then the funds in the account may become subject to a judgment lien. This could wipe out some, or possibly all, of the account.

If the original owner of a POD account adds one child as a beneficiary but has other children that he wants to share in the account, he may unintentionally disinherit the other children. If one of his children predeceases, the account may nevertheless go through that child’s probate. If one of the beneficiaries is a minor, a court ordered process may be necessary for the bank or financial institution to make a distribution of the account until the minor is an adult.

Upon the account owner’s death, the account cannot be used to settle the decedent’s final affairs, or be used to satisfy ongoing expenses that might be necessary to maintain a home, business or other asset. The account is not available to pay the last taxes of the decedent.

All of these problems may be alleviated through the use of a revocable trust. When you create a revocable trust and transfer your assets into the trust, you remain in control of your assets. When you become incapacitated, the person or institution that you’ve named to serve as your successor trustee steps in seamlessly to handle your financial affairs. Upon your death, the assets in the trust avoid the probate process.

I’ve had multiple clients who have already established revocable trusts have their bankers or financial firms instruct them to place their accounts as POD. This is absurd. When a client has already created a revocable trust, POD accounts may do nothing more than bypass the client’s express wishes and serve to complicate his trust administration.

In one recent case that I’ve handled, my client – unbeknownst to me – created several POD accounts, one for each of her grandchildren. Late in life, she became ill. One of her daughters, not realizing that the accounts each named different grandchildren as beneficiaries, drained an account fully to pay for the client’s medical and nursing home care before accessing a different account.

The result of her actions was to disinherit some of the grandchildren, since their accounts were consumed for their grandmother’s care. The other accounts that weren’t consumed were eventually distributed to the other grandchildren, who chose not to share their inheritance.

In yet another case, a client named her son as a POD beneficiary. At the time of the client’s death, son was undergoing a divorce. The account sums ended up included in alimony calculations. The frustrating aspect of this case was that the client had a revocable trust that was drafted specifically to protect the son’s inheritance from a divorcing spouse.

I could go on. I hope that you now realize that for those with even a modest net worth, POD accounts are not the best estate planning vehicle. Instead, talk to a qualified estate planning attorney to establish a proper estate plan.

NFL Playoff Teams Earn Much Less Than Other Postseason Pro Squads

by Ed Frank

It's a well-known fact that the National Football League is a billion-dollar-plus business. Surprisingly, however, that the NFL playoffs are not that profitable for the 12 teams that reach the playoffs. In fact, the four teams that exit after the first round could actually lose money.

A long playoff run in baseball, basketball and hockey can generate $20 to 30 million in revenue with 50-percent profit margins.

NFL playoff teams collect a fraction of that amount as expenses and player incentives pile up.

You seldom hear that fact as all NFL teams already make big money thanks to about $5 billion in media money from ESPN, FOX, NBC and CBS. For lack of a better term, the NFL model is a Socialist model. The NFL splits revenue evenly among all 32 teams from national media and licensing deals. That includes doling out equal portions of gate receipts. That model continues into the playoffs.

This is not the case in Major League Baseball, the National Hockey League and the National Basketball League Association.

For example, a team like the New England Patriots can generate $10 million in gate receipts for a playoff game, but they don't see a dime of that as it flows to the league. Each playoff team does get a stipend for expenses such as travel and to pay for players' contract incentives. And the home team does get to keep receipts for parking and concessions.

Remember there are only 11 playoff games, including the Super Bowl, in the NFL. Baseball playoff games can run 40 or more games and basketball and hockey as high as 80 to 85 games.

Last year, each player on the Super Bowl Champion Philadelphia Eagles was awarded a winner's share of $115,000, the losing New England Patriots, $57,000.

By comparison, in 2017, the playoff pool for the champion Houston Astros split a record $84.5 million.

These facts are not written to make anyone feel sorry for the billion-dollar team owners and the millionaire team players. It's just a fact of the wide divergence in playoff money between the National Football League and the other professional leagues.

A Familiar Name To Manage Fort Myers Miracle In 2019

Toby Gardenhire, son of longtime Minnesota Twins manager Ron Gardenhire, this week was named manager of the Fort Myers Miracle, the high A farm team of the Twins.

The younger Gardenhire, in just his second year as a professional baseball manager, is moving up after a successful rookie year as manager of the Twins low A Cedar Rapids Kernels.

Gardenhire spent seven years in the Twins farm system as a player and five years coaching in college baseball.

Ramon Borrego, who managed the Miracle to the Florida State League Championship last season, was promoted to manager of the Twins new Double A affiliate Pensacola Blue Wahoos.

The elder Gardenhire is now the manager of the Detroit Tigers.✪

Ownership Change For Miracle Baseball

The Fort Myers Miracle Baseball Club announced recently that Andrew Kaufmann (Kaufy Baseball, LLC) closed the acquisition of the controlling ownership interest in the team and will be the new managing owner, effective immediately.

Kaufmann takes over for Jason Hochberg (SJS Beacon Baseball, LLC), who will continue as a minority partner in the club. Chris Peters will also remain as president and general manager. Under Hochberg's leadership, the Miracle won two championships in five years, most recently in 2018.

"As a lifelong baseball enthusiast, I am fired up for the opportunity to not only continue the tradition of excellence that this club has enjoyed since its inaugural season in 1926, but also to invest in new ways to enhance the fan experience for years to come," Kaufmann said. "We plan to continue to make Hammond Stadium the number one destination for affordable family fun in Southwest Florida."

The Miracle will continue as the Class-A Advanced Affiliate of the Minnesota Twins and to assist the Twins with Spring Training operations. Kaufmann expressed his thanks for their support and longstanding partnership since 1992. Hochberg is also optimistic about the future and happy to remain on board.

"It has been a true honor to own the Miracle since 2014," Hochberg said. "The fans will love Andrew, and he will be a frequent presence at beautiful Hammond Stadium. Lee County and the Twins have been, and will continue to be, tremendous partners of the Miracle. I am excited to see the club reach new heights under Andrew's strong leadership and grateful to remain a part of the team."

The Miracle will celebrate their 2018 FSL Championship in 2019 with the best promotional schedule in their history. The number one focus will be on fun and the fan experience.

"I could not be more excited about the future of the Miracle organization," Peters said. "We have a solid foundation in place, and Southwest Florida continues to be one of the fastest growing areas in the nation. Our potential is unlimited."

Kaufmann, who is originally from

New York, currently makes his home in Jacksonville, Florida. He and his family plan to live in Bonita Springs for most of the baseball season.

"The Twins and Miracle have been partners in Lee County for over 25 years, and we welcome Andrew Kaufmann to that partnership," Twins Director of Minor League Operations Jeremy Zoll said. "We are excited by Andrew's ideas for Twins and Miracle fans in Southwest Florida. Baseball games are back in Fort Myers starting February 23 with our first spring training game, and we are ready to work with Andy and the Miracle staff all throughout the baseball season."

Miracle Opening Night is Thursday, April 4 against Charlotte at Hammond Stadium.✪

City Of Palms Classic Results Stir National Rankings

The ripple effects of an upset-filled 46th annual Culligan City of Palms are still being felt throughout the country. After more than 13,000 people watched the six-day event at Suncoast Credit Union Arena, a top-three attendance figure in tournament history, the national rankings have taken on a much different look.

Every team in both the USA Today Super 25 and MaxPreps Top 25 moved up or down by at least one spot in the first rankings issued by the respective polls after the tournament. By contrast, the top 11 teams in the MaxPreps poll issued January 3 remained in the precise order from the week before, despite a full slate of holiday tournament action. That was also true of the top 12 teams in the January 2 USA Today Super 25.

"There's a reason so many people come from all across the country to watch the Culligan City of Palms Classic. No tournament has nearly as much impact on the national scene," said John Naylor, the event's executive director.

While a few teams moved up or down in the January 7 USA Today Super 25, 11 of the top 12 teams stayed the same, with nine of the top 10 teams in the January 7 MaxPreps standing pat from last week.

The rankings prove the value of wearing the City of Palms crown. McEachern of Powder Springs, Georgia

Chart Reading Class Offered

America's Boating Club and the San Carlos Bay Sail & Power Squadron will be conducting its popular Local Waters Chart Reading class on Saturday, January 26, February 23 and March 23 from 8 a.m. to noon.

The one-day class, held at the squadron classroom located at 16048 San Carlos Boulevard in Fort Myers, will teach students how to read local waters chart 11427. Students will learn the basics of latitude and longitude, how to find where they are and how to get to where they want to go and how to take bearings.

Since there are a very limited number of charts in the classroom, students are strongly urged to bring chart 11427 to class. Charts are best purchased online from Ocean Grafix. Be sure to order the mapfold version of 11427.

Cost is $45 for one student and $70 for two people sharing the materials. It includes a divider and a plotter. Students can register on line at www.scbps.com or call 466-4040 and leave a message.✪

rose from No. 7 to No. 1 in the MaxPreps rankings and from No. 10 to No. 2 in the USA Today poll after winning the title. University School of Fort Lauderdale plummeted all the way out of the MaxPreps poll from No. 5 after failing to defend its championship. USA Today had University School at No. 23 going into the City of Palms and hasn't ranked the Sharks since.

Tournament organizers have already begun planning to make even more of an impact next time, when the event returns to a Wednesday-through-Monday format. The 47th annual Culligan City of Palms Classic will take place from December 18 to 23 at the Suncoast Credit Union Arena.

By then, many of the players from the just-completed event will be starring for top-flight college teams.

Awards that were handed out at the 46th annual tournament include:

Hustle Award – Paulie Stramaglia, Mountain Brook in Mountain Brook, Alabama

Hometown Hero (essay contest winner) – Elijah Taylor, Imhotep Charter in Philadelphia

Steve Bumm Coach's Award – Tom Massolio, Charlotte High in Punta Gorda
Team Sportsmanship – Paul VI of Fairfax, Virginia

Hypothyroidism Yields Depression, Anxiety And OCD

by Suzy Cohen, RPh

Dear Readers: If you have hypothyroidism, it can cause depression or anxiety, or OCD. The medications used to treat the psychiatric disorders work temporarily at best, if at all because they don't address the low thyroid hormone.

Anxiety is sometimes overlooked and misdiagnosed. Anxiety can have many definitions and physical symptoms. For some, it could be defined as looping thoughts, heart racing, racing thoughts, trembling, internal tremors, feeling nervous, having unnatural fears or constant worry.

Failing to normalize your low thyroid hormone levels will make it harder, if not impossible for you to get well.

There's a very strong correlation between psychiatric disorders and thyroid disease.

Some of you who are hanging on by a thread with severe or suicidal depression will find solace in the fact that a simple, inexpensive thyroid medication (or supplement) could turn things around for you.

You cannot trust your lab tests even if they say "normal." The reference ranges were based upon a sick population. If you are in the "normal" reference range, that's not saying a whole lot. I cover this in my book Thyroid Healthy: Lose Weight, Look Beautiful and Live the Life You Imagine.

By the time it takes you to read the next paragraph below, someone else will have taken their own life. That's because every 40 seconds someone commits suicide in the world, and completes it.

If you associate depression as a problem that impacts older people like people who recall the sound of a typewriter click, the ringing of a telephone or disco... well, you're wrong. It affects children, adolescents and adults of any age. In fact, one in 33 children and one in eight adolescents (age range 10 to 19) have a diagnosis of clinical depression.

Up to 60 percent of people with thyroid disease are 100 percent completely unaware of their condition. They assume they have some other condition that their physician has diagnosed them with, perhaps stress, high cholesterol, diabetes, bipolar, depression, anxiety, OCD, obesity, chronic fatigue syndrome, fibromyalgia or some other chronic illness or infection.

If you have depression or anxiety, you might benefit from a trial run of thyroid medication. The type that's right for you deserves a thoughtful, accurate response so I've written a longer version of this article, and you can receive it to your email by signing up for my free newsletter at www.suzycohen.com

In the meantime, it's safe to say I think that thyroid medication and/or dietary supplements are better than antidepressants? Impressive results from STAR*D Trial (Sequenced Treatment Alternatives to Relieve Depression) have confirmed this.

You can also take thyroid medication or supplements, along with a prescription antidepressant. It's not either/or, it could be both. Talk to your doctor about what's right for you. Finally, I would be remiss if I did not mention lithium and fish oils as other natural options for mood stabilization and neurotransmitter support.

This information is not intended to treat, cure or diagnose your condition. Suzy Cohen is the author of The 24-Hour Pharmacist and is a registered pharmacist. To contact her, visit www.SuzyCohen.com. ✨

Beautifulife:

Forever Young

by Kay Casperson

I can almost guarantee that some of you have heard over and over again, "you are not that old" or when you tell someone your age, they say, "no way, I would have never guessed that." This is because some of you have learned to master the art of living your life based on how you think and feel, not necessarily how old you are.

We all want to live in this world for as long as we are healthy and thriving, right? I believe that age is just a number and that your real age is how you feel, how you act, and ultimately what you want it to be or where you want it to stay.

My Dad is going to be 84 this year, and he is still very active; in fact, busier than most people much younger than him. He looks good, is in good shape and has a terrific attitude and outlook. Staying active with his hobbies is essential to him, from bowling, hunting, fishing and golf to taking care of his home and his summer lake house. He helps to run a weekly wellness center at his church that feeds, clothes and provides care to hundreds of people in need every week. How does he do it, I often ask, and his advice might not be the norm for others. His diet does not follow what others would think to be healthy, from avoiding most vegetables, salads or fruits, to eating everything he likes including sweets, treats and pastries. He doesn't drink much water throughout the day and does not have a regular exercise program. He would say that his key to staying young and healthy is to continue to do things that you love to do, help others, surround yourself with family and good friends and say your prayers.

Being forever young does not just mean paying attention to how you can continue to look young but rather to keep your heart, mind and body all in balance so that you can stay vibrant, happy and healthy for as long as you can. I came up with a forever young package of skincare, vitamins and essential oils that work well in helping me stay vibrant and healthy, and also to be able to offer something that I believe in and use to my clients. I have learned in my life journey that there are so many other important factors in keeping that youthful feeling and staying vibrant and healthy above and beyond the products that you use.

I have actually done some studies on the lives of several centenarians to find out what the best advice was for living to be 100 and beyond. What amazes me the most is that there is not a cookie cutter way to living longer, and the ideas that worked for some were completely different than others. There were, however, a few common suggestions that popped up regularly and here are some of my favorites:

Be positive. Think about the good things that have happened in your life and focus on all the beautiful things that you can continue to look forward to.

Stay active. Even though exercising was not a priority for most centenarians, keeping busy with projects and activities was good for the mind and body.

Do everything in moderation. From eating to drinking to everything in between, many agreed upon enjoying most things without too much indulging.

Keep interested. Continue to do the things you love to do for as long as you can. If you have to stop, replace it with something else that makes you happy.

Help others. Get involved with an organization or give some of your time assisting others, and you will fill your heart with joy and continue to have a sense of accomplishment.

Regularly connect with family and friends. Find every reason possible to stay close through phone calls, emails, social media or gatherings. Nothing replaces a hug now and then.

Have faith. Being able to pray and give thanks for the years you have been blessed with and the ones to come was unanimous amongst the group for having more hope, less worry and continued happiness.

Overall, the thing I learned the most in exploring the lives of people that are aging is that there is not just one single piece of advice but many. I would suggest that you find what ultimately works for you, and get into a routine that you can continue to follow. Don't worry or pay attention to what others are doing, what age you are or how fast time is passing by. Instead, keep focused on the fact that in your heart and in your mind, you can stay forever young and live your best and most beautiful life.

My affirmation for you this week is:

"I continue to love and cherish my life and know in my heart that I remain forever young."

Chronic Pain Healing In Our Community

by Ross Hauser, MD and Marion Hauser, MS, RD

We love talking with people and hearing their stories. Many people have been dealing with joint pain for so long, it has become part of how they must plan their days – and limits so much of their retirement enjoyment, their ability to work, or participation in travel or sports. Often, this results because they truly had no idea that other treatment options existed for their conditions. Is surgery really the only option? Pain pills for life? Just "deal" with it?

Our bodies have amazing healing potential! When we take care of ourselves by staying active, eating real food and limiting our stress, we have an even better chance to heal. But sometimes we need a little help! We recently experienced a very fun afternoon at the Community House speaking with people about regenerative options for pain, as well as ways to enhance our longevity using Blue Zone concepts.

We used our musculoskeletal ultrasound machine to examine attendees and answer questions about a variety of chronic pain conditions, including frozen shoulder, low back pain, neck and thoracic pain, headaches, post-knee replacement pain, meniscus problems, thumb arthritis and spinal stenosis (a common diagnosis that is, interestingly, often incorrect). Most chronic pain is due to looseness in the support structures (ligaments/tendons) which leads to unstable joints and spine. At our clinic, Caring Medical in Fort Myers, we offer a treatment called prolotherapy that stimulates the body to produce the healing cells it needs to strengthen and tighten this looseness which results in pain resolution in most cases.

If you would like to meet us and discuss your case, we're hosting another event with food, wine and raffle prizes on the evening of February 5. If you have medical questions that you'd like to ask in person, please join us.

This information is not intended to treat, cure or diagnose your condition. Caring Medical Regenerative Medicine Clinics has two locations: one in Oak Park, Illinois, and one in Fort Myers. It was established in 1991 by Ross Hauser, MD, and Marion Hauser, MS, RD. They can be reached at info@caringmedical.com. ✨ were trapped between the Sunset Beach Resort and Lantana condominium on West Gulf Drive. All were adopted (Lana, Tanner, Sonny and Cher) to lovely people. However, Sonny and Cher's mom has reached a time in her life when she feels she must move in with family over on Pine Island. Unfortunately, in addition to her granddaughter being allergic, her son operates a business out of his home that is directly on Pine Island Road and the doors are always opening and closing, so it's not safe for kitties. These are very special kitties, and need to be together forever. Call Pam at 472-4823 if you can give these sweethearts a new home.*

New Year's Kittens

Donner, Cupid and Comet are so adorable. Cupid, in the middle, is the only remaining female. These kittens are very sweet and now 10 weeks old. The only folks that came to see them left with two kittens. Maybe there's someone out there that will take home triplets. They are too cute to choose. Call Pam at 472-4823 to come spend time with these precious little babies.*
